The happiest men who live by toil Are those who cultivate the soil.

Cultural Uses of Lime.

The advantages of the use of lime are so many that it is almost impossible to enumerate them. Their effects may be described as being both chemical and mechanical, and as being exercised both upon the organic and inorganic constituents of the soil. The following may be taken as a summary of some of the principal benefits to be derived from it:

1. Upon deep alluvial and clay soil i increases the crop of potatoes and renders them less waxy. Sprinkled over them in the store heap, it preserves them, and when riddled over the cut sets, it wonder fully increases their fertility.

2. Lime eradicates the finger and disease in turnips and gives greater soundness to the bulbs.

3. It gives, when applied to soft meadow land, a larger production of mere nutritions grasses. It also exterminates coarse and sour grasses, destroys couch grass, and acts powerfully upon rye grasses.

4. Upon arable land it destroys weeds of various kinds.

5. It rapidly decomposes vegetable matter, producing a large amount of food for plants in the form of carbonic acid gas. 6. It destroys or neutralizes the acids in the soil; hence its adaptability to our sour soils. 7. It acts powerfully upon some of the inorganic parts of the soils, especially on the sulphate of iron found in peaty soils, and the sulphate of magnesia and alumina. 8. It proves fatal to worms and larvae of injurious insects, though favorable to the growth of shell-bearers. 9. Slack lime added to vegetable matter causes it to give of its nitrogen in the torm of ammonia. Upon soils in which ammonia is combined with acids it sets free the ammonia, which is seized upon by the

10. Solubility in water causes it to sink and to ameliorate the subsoil. When the soil contains fragment of granite or trap rocks, lime hastens their decomposition and liberates the silicates. 11. Its combination with the acids in the soil produces saline compounds-such as potash, soda, etc.

12. Strewn over young plants, it de stroys or drives away the turnip fly.

13. Worked in with grass seeds, the beneficial effects of lime, chalk, marl, and shell-sand have been visible for thirty

14. Applied to the rot heap, lime effectually destroys the seeds of weeds

To sum its advantages: When properly applied to the soil, it purifies and stimulates its action, thereby promoting the growth of healthy vegetables of all kinds. A Good and Wholesome Harvest

Drink. As alchohol drinks have happily been driven from the harvest fields, there have been various drinks besides water substituted, but scarcely any of them meeting fully the conditions sought for in the way of a wholesome satisfying beverage. Water, even in all its purity, does not seem to quench the thirst and stimulate the body, as it produces additional perspiration and passes through the pores almost like passing through a collander, leaving the system exhausted and weak; besides, a drink of cold water, when suffering under a great degree of heat, is dangerous, even at times producing sudden death. Latterly in England and elsewhere a drink is prepared by mixing oatmeal with water, in the proportion of three or four ounces to a gallon of water. This is found not only to satisfy the thirst better than water, even when tempered with vinegar or other acid, but to produce additional strength of body. Oatmeal possesses a peculiar aroma and acts as a very active stimulant to the surface of the skin as to cause the complete digestion of the liquid. Men employed in an atmosphere of the intensest heat are much comforted with it, and become very fond of it. Hence it is in a measure trial; and we shall be glad if at the end of the season those substituting the oat meal and water will make report as to the results — Country Gentleman.

tues and without any drawbacks whatever.

From our own experience, and the observation of others, we can fully indorse the testimony of the St. Louis Miller, on the healthful properties of the above esculent. Lung and liver complaints are certainly benefitted, often cured, by a free consumption of onions, either cooked or raw. Colds yield to them like magic.

Don't be afraid of them. Taken at night all offense will be wanting by morning, and the good effects will amply compensate for the trifling annoyance. Taken regularly they greatly promote the health of the lungs and digestive organs. I Blot Out a Day.

I keep on a desk before me a calendar of the year, with the day of each week by numerals. When the day is past I draw my pen across a figure or the figure representing a day. It is gone, and I blot it out. So far as the column of numerals is concerned, I can do so.

But I am startled by the words, "I blot out a day." A day is a wheel in the great machinery of life, -a link in the chain of my probation. It is as truly a part of vital and essential being as a year or a century. The day is given me. Will it vanish at my bidding? I did not originate it; I only received it. I have no more power to blot it out than to bring it in.

It was a gift. How should I treat the the giver if I could and would blot it out? It came as a proof of the love of the Giver. To many that day came not. It was on its way, but the chain broke. But Divine kindness would not allow me to be a loser. Shall I not honor the Giver?

A day of sadness perhaps! Blot it out for that reason? If my sins made the sadness of the day, then let the day standa memento of and reminder of my folly. That day is worth saving that brings such a voice of reproof. Perhaps the day was sad under divine discipline. Surely, then, it ought to stand lest, blotting it out, offeace be given to him who afflicts "for our profit that we might be partakers of his holiness."

A day of gladness, perhaps-the sky bright, the air balmy, joy in friends and all wordly comfort-above all, joy in the Lor l and gladoess in his salvation. Shall I mar such a beautiful picture? Shall I blot out such a day? As I erase the figure with a pen shall I drop it out of my mind as if there had never been such a day? Is this the kind return?

A day! That day just erased from my calendar, how much could have been accomplished in it! What a noble river of holy emotions might have rolled through my soul in that one day ?-what fervor of love, arder in prayer, and workings of faith, bringing the light and joy of heaven unto the soul!

There hangs my calendar. I cannot lot out much longer. The last day of the year is at hand. The symbols of what remains may be erased by my driving pen; but these links of life-these waymarks of the path to eternity, these gifts of God, these opportunities of usefulness,-my gratitude shall welcome them, my love and zeal carry out their great design. They shall aid in the grand result, that my name shall not be blotted out of the Book of

But a new family never moves into the village that he does not find them out, to give them a neighborly welcome, and offer any little service he can render. He is usually on the lookout to give strangers a seat in his pew at church. He is always ready to watch with a sick neighbor, and look after his affairs for him, and I've sometimes thought he and his wife keep house plants in winter just for the sake of being able to send little bouquets to invalids.
