The Old Turnpike.

We hear no more of the clanking hoof,
And the stage-coach rattling by;
For the steam-king rules the travelled world,
And the old pike's left to die. And the old pixe's left to die.
The grass creeps o'er the filthy path,
And the stealthy daisies steal,
Where once the stage horse, day by day,
Lifted his iron heel.

No more the weary stager dreads No more the weary stage releas
The toil of the coming morn;
No more the bustling landlord runs
At the sound of the echoing horn;
For the dust lies still upon the read,
And bright-eyed children play,
Where once the clattering hoof and heel

Rattled along the way. No more we hear the cracking whip,
Or the strong wheels rumbling round;
Ah, ha! the water drives on,
And an iron horse is found.
The coach stands rusting in the yard.
And the horse has sought the plough;
We have spanned the world with an iron rail,
And the steam king rules us now.

And the steam-king rules us now. The old Turnpike is a pike no more,
Wide open stands its gate;
We have made us a road for our horses to stride
Which we ride at a flying rate;
We have filled the valleys and level'd the hills,
And tunnelled the mountain's side,
And 'round the rough erag's dizzy verge,
Fearlessly on we ride.

On—on—on—with a haughty front!
A puff, a shrick, a bound;
While the tardy echoes wake too late,
To babble back the sound;
And the old pike road is left alone,
And the stagers sought the plough;
We have circled the carth with an iron rail,
And the steam king rules us now.

The Story-Teller.

A STORY OF THE WAR;

The Tennessee Blacksmith

Near the cross-roads, not far from the Cumberland Mountains, stood the village He was respected, wherever known, for his stern integrity. He served God, and did not fear man—and, it may be safe-ly added, nor the devil, either. His cour-age was proverbial in the neighborhood; and it was a common remark, when wishing to pay any person a high compliment, to say, "He is as brave as old Bradley." One night toward the close of September, as he stood alone by the anvil plying his labors, his countenance evinced a peculiar satisfaction as he brought his lammer ground. She was now convinced that her through them to a road a quarter of a mile distant, then into a wagon and rapidly driven off. It is seldom that descriptive articles have the depth and meaning which make Rebecca Harding Davis's "By-Paths in the Mountains"—the second paper in this Number—so interesting. This is the first of three papers to be given under this title; describing the mountains of Virginia and North Carolina, with reference particularly to the varied attractions which they offer to summer holiday travellers. It is beautifully illustrated with seventeen drawings by Charles Graham and Miss Jessie Curtis.

Themas Knox's paper on "Clubs on Great South Bay," is very timely and entertaining, and is ably illustrated by A. B. Frost.

The most popular articles in the Number, probably, is Mrs. Oliphant's interesting biographical sketch of Queen Victoria. Five portraits of the Queen's and of Prince Albert's father and mother, of the Prince of Wales and the Princess Royal as little children, with other interesting illustrations.
