GEN. GARFIELD is growing in popular favor every day. He is the people's choice.

THE letter of "Viator" came duly to hand, but its length prevents its appearance in this week's issue.

THE Republican party is about to doff its coat, when the Confederate Democracy will receive some telling blows.

GEN. GARFIELD's journey from his Ohio home to New York was a perfect ovation along the entire route. The people love the man.

S. R. MASON, ESQ., late Greenback candidate for Governor, made a masterly speech at the Republican ratification meeting held in Pittsburgh on Saturday night.

THE Democrats of Union county have nominated Hon. A. H. Dill for Congress. This means the shelving of poor Curtin. The Democrats over there don't take kindly to renegades.

A PITTSBURGH Republican offers to bet $15,000 that Garfield will be elected President. Here's a fine chance for some speculative Democrat who has the nerve to risk his shekels.

THE Democrats of Indiana are anxious to have "old money bags" English got off the ticket, but he holds on like grim death to a deceased African, and has no notion of complying with their wishes.

THE friends of English should see to having a guardian appointed over him, for if he keeps on with his extravagant benefactions, like his one dollar contribution to the Chicago relief fund, he will come to poverty yet.

OUR townsman, Hon. H. G. Fisher, is booked for a speech before the Garfield killed a negro voter in his lowly cabin at and Arthur Club of Altoona on the evening of the 19th inst. GEN. WEAVER, the Greenback candidate for President, is hard up for campaign money, and he has issued a circular to the members of that party, asking them to contribute one dollar each to the campaign fand. Send in your ducats, ye faithful, and let the General have a chance to spread himself.

Then there came another suitor To win the maiden fair; He was not a bear-faced wooer, But muzzled like a bear; He had a fine imperial, Moustache, and whiskers, curled, And a lordly air about him, As if he owned the world. Twas said he was a toreign count, Incomite while here.

Twas said he was a foreign count, Incognito while here, And had at hence a shady park, With room for one more dear. He though the midden of our song Would find berself in lack

Would find berself to table For, wedding him, the happy dear Would get a fine yeung back. They met, and when the fair one gazed Upon his whiskers fine, She felt that she had found at last

The paragon divine. They control through the summer months, And married in the full; She gave her heart and hand, and he Gave beard, monstache, and all. One night they passed in pleasant dreams, A happy wedded pair; But ah, alas! the next morn's light

But ab, mas i the next morn's light Brought sorrow and despair. The count arose and washed his face, But fear o'crwhelmed his soul; The giae had started, and he left
