

Extract of a letter to the Editors, dated...

Harrisburg, June 10, 1839. "A resolution was passed in the Senate to-day, fixing the final adjournment of the Legislature for the 25th inst. just two weeks later than the time first agreed upon by the House. Amendments were offered in the House, fixing the 18th and 20th—but the majority, fearful that the Senate would not agree to either of the amendments, voted for the day designated by that body. Thus, you perceive, that the federal Senate, in opposition to the wish of the popular branch of the Legislature, has procrastinated the session to an unnecessary length, at an expense of about $10,000—and all to embarrass the administration, and afford Thaddeus Stevens an opportunity of indulging his spite against the republican members of the House for electing him from his seat.

"A message was received from the Governor, informing the House that the 'Repair Fund' was entirely exhausted, and if some provision was not made to supply the deficiency the public works may necessarily be stopped. His Excellency also, in answer to the resolution of Senate calling upon him for the reasons why he has not yet paid the contractors, &c. on the Gettysburg railroad, sent in a message to that body stating, in substance, that the Executive being a separate branch of the government, would not consider it proper or right to call on the Legislature for the reasons which influenced their acts, and he saw no good and sufficient reason why they should call upon him; but he would inform the Senate, that the loan authorized for that purpose, is directed in the resolution to be paid in six months from the time it was taken, and that no provision is yet made for its repayment, &c. &c. "The bill relative to the election of county officers, &c. is not yet finally disposed of. Some difference of opinion exists between the two houses, and also between members of each house, relative to the details of the bill—it will, however, be carried without much difficulty.

"No improvement bill has yet been passed, and it is a matter of doubt whether or not any will be carried this session. "The committees to examine the conduct of the late and present board of Canal Commissioners are still in session every day—and flaming reports may shortly be expected, particularly from the committee of the House, who have the late board under their care. Astounding disclosures of corruption and fraud during the late gubernatorial campaign are being made daily, and unless I am greatly mistaken, such scenes of villainy will be developed, as will bring the blush of shame to many who did not dream of having their infamous conduct brought to light by a committee of honest men. "Nothing has yet been done in the Senate, in relation to the report of the committee in the case of Gen. Miller. It is thought that it will be called up in a day or two."

DINNER TO COL. PARSONS.

By a reference to the subjoined correspondence, it will be observed that the democratic citizens of Cumberland county, as a manifestation of their high respect and regard for the fearless and intrepid course of Col. A. V. Parsons, of the Senate, tendered him a public dinner; which, owing to the urgency of official duties, he has been compelled to decline. "The course pursued by Col. P. during the brief period that he has occupied a seat on the floor of the Senate, has won for him a proud reputation with the democratic party of Pennsylvania; and the testimony now offered of the estimation in which he is held by the democrats of 'Old Mother Cumberland,' must be to him a source of high gratification. He has however, richly merited their good opinion, and will receive not only the thanks of the people of Cumberland, but of every republican in the State.

CARLISLE, May 27, 1839.

SIR:—The undersigned democratic citizens of the county of Cumberland, admiring your fearless and intrepid course in the Senate of Pennsylvania, in defence of liberal principles, would, as a mark of their high respect and regard, solicit your acceptance of a public dinner, to be given in the Borough of Carlisle at such time as your convenience may suggest.

- Very truly your ob't. serv'ts. Ramsey Jacob Baughman Joseph Lobach J. Reharr Alm Lambertson William Bigley Snyder Ripley W. Fouk Robert Lusik Michael Holcomb Samuel Crop jr R. Angney Henry D. To COL. ANSON V. PARSONS.

SENATE CHAMBER, HARRISBURG, May 30, 1839. GENTLEMEN:—Your favor dated the 27th ult., was received yesterday, soliciting my acceptance of a public dinner, to be given in the Borough of Carlisle. Be assured, gentlemen, that it would afford me the highest gratification to meet the democratic citizens of Cumberland county at the festive board; the urgent and imperious official duties which devolve upon me and almost hourly demand my attention, require that I should decline your kind invitation. The very flattering notice you have been pleased to take of my course in the Senate of Pennsylvania "in defence of liberal principles," will ever be recollected by me with the most pleasing emotions.

When a contest of the bitterest cast, unrivalled in excitement and unparalleled in malignity, had been carried on by the late party in power, for more than six months—struggling as in the gasp of death to retain that power, which had been given them by a minority of the people—was terminated at the ballot box in the triumphant success of honest, but indignant freemen, every patriot and true hearted Pennsylvanian supposed the conflict was ended. Although the democratic party had witnessed the most profligate waste in the expenditure of money by the federal party in endeavoring to contaminate and corrupt the minds of the citizens of Pennsylvania, although on the election ground and at the polls the same party had been guilty of frauds the most gross and vile, which the mind of man, filled with deep and black designs could invent—yet, defeat was the consequence of their iniquity and victory the reward of our firmness and integrity.

The history of more than sixty years in this republic, justified us in indulging the sanguine hope that the majority of numbers would rule as it ever had done. But no! the votes were scarcely counted before the startling doctrine was unblushingly proclaimed to the world, by the first officer under the late executive, that the majority should not rule, and the freemen of this enlightened and democratic Commonwealth were called upon to "treat the election of the 9th of October last as though it had never been." Republicans were unwilling to believe that any men within the State could be sunk so low in the scale of moral degradation, as even to make the bold effort of putting such reasonable principles into practice; and not till the dark clouds of infamy, which obscured the rays of the sun in the political horizon of Pennsylvania on the 4th of December last, came o'er their vision, were their senses conjured of the sad reality. It was for the first time revealed on that memorable day, to the astonished world that in the democratic State Pennsylvania, the majority must yield to the minority—that the ballot box might be trampled under foot, and the votes thrown to the four winds of Heaven.

Amid the gaze of democrats, did the late Secretary of the Commonwealth, Thaddeus Stevens, and the Speaker of the Senate, boldly attempt to put these vile doctrines into practical operation. In this hour of danger, when they threatened to overturn the principles and form of our government, and destroy the liberties of the country, the honest yeomanry arose in the majesty of their strength and stayed the hands of the destroyers, who would have plunged our country in civil war, and drenched this peaceful land with blood. It was after the close of those scenes that I entered the Senate of Pennsylvania—a high sense of duty demanded that I should raise my feeble voice in defence of the principles which, for more than half a century, have guided and sustained the party to which I have the honor to belong, and impelled me in my official station to endeavor to expose to the world, the base designs and nefarious acts of those who had made this attack upon the liberties of the country and her republican institutions. It seemed to me that silence at such a time was treason. If what I have thus said and done meets the approbation of my constituents, and that of the democratic party of Pennsylvania, it is the highest honor I desire; it consoles me with the pleasing reflection, that the duty which I owed to society has been faithfully discharged.

Accept, gentlemen, individually, my highest respects, and believe me to be very sincerely, Your ob't. serv't., A. V. PARSONS. To James Woodburn, William R. Gorges, William S. Ramsey, Robert Snodgrass, Esq's, and other democratic citizens of Cumberland county.

MEXICO.

The New Orleans True American of May 31st, has the following by a late arrival from Vera Cruz. Col. Bee, Minister from Texas, had been refused permission to land at Vera-Cruz, but he was finally allowed to do so. "The city of Tampico was besieged by the government troops under Bustamante, who was at Altamira, 20 miles distant. His cavalry had advanced within a quarter of a mile of Tampico drove in the pickets after capturing 10 or 12 men. The only troops in Tampico were the militia of the town. Gen. Urrea had arrived and was expected to be joined by 300 men, the remnant of those who had escaped after the conflict near Puebla, under Mexia. If they should arrive in time, the force will be increased to 1000.—The city was strongly fortified, and it is probable that from the temper displayed by the people, that they will make a most obstinate defence. Business of all kinds was completely prostrated and no intercourse whatever maintained with the interior.—Even marketing was almost entirely cut off. The foreign consuls had sent out an agent to wait on General Arista, who before the arrival of Bustamante was in command, to learn his intentions in relation to foreigners and their property in Tampico. His answer was, that as far as he could possibly protect the persons and property of foreigners, it was both his duty and his wish to do so, to the utmost extent, but as the city would probably be taken by assault, and in the contest both bombs and cannon would be used, he could not answer for the consequences and therefore advised foreigners to remove with their effects out of the city. But as there was a very large amount of property in the city and no means of transportation, they could not possibly follow this advice. Besides the supreme government had by a decree confiscated goods that had been entered at the port of Tampico, and were found in the interior. The utmost alarm prevailed at Tampico among the foreigners, and every effort had been made with the American senior naval officer there to order the Woodbury into the river for their protection; but as the schooner was not under the orders, he declined doing it.

There was lying off the port of Tampico the U. S. ship Warren, the British sloop of war Combs, and a French gun brig. The best understanding prevailed among the officers of these different vessels for the mutual protection of the foreign interests, and no doubt every thing in their power will be done to render assistance, but as the vessels themselves are lying nine miles from the city, with a very bad bar between it and them, it is feared that when the critical moment shall arrive, requiring their assistance, they will be unable to render it.

The general opinion among the best informed people is, that upon the fall of Tampico, Santa Anna will be declared Dictator, and that his plan is to close all the Mexican ports against foreign commerce, with the exception of Vera Cruz. Bustamante had issued a proclamation, inviting the people to their duty to the government party, which, if they did, the country would have no other enemy to contend with than Texas.
