

"Willoughby had represented himself as a rich planter from Alabama, and that he was sojourning at the north for the purpose of regaining his health. Placing my child under proper protection, I flew in pursuit of the destroyer of my peace, with my heart bursting with revenge. At Montgomery (Ala.) I learned that Willoughby had been there in company with a lady, who he called his wife—that he had been for years a notorious black leg and swindler, and had gone to Mobile leaving his wife (my wife) behind in circumstances of the most deplorable...

"I arrived here in a complete state of desolation; and being unable to learn any thing of my wife or the villain Willoughby, I became discouraged and disheartened—the bolt was my resort. I mingled with the vilest of the vile; and last night was persuaded by several others, to visit a house of ill fame. I entered—and the first object that met my gaze was my wife, sitting upon the lap of a disgusting ruffian, and resting her tender cheek, which I had not suffered 'even the winds of Heaven to visit too roughly,' to his disgusting caresses. Sir, sir! I became mad! I can tell no more, but that I rushed from the house, invoking the most impious maledictions upon him who had been the cause of such misery and anguish; and found myself this morning in the situation you now behold me. Sir, nothing which you can inflict will be a punishment to me; and you can bestow no greater favor than to take my life. I have lived too long—I am ready to die."

A Swartwaterer tripped up.—Some time last summer, a merchant from Harper's Ferry, named J. Stevens, visited this city for the purpose of purchasing goods, bringing with him such recommendations as to satisfy our largest dealers of his solvency and respectability. He bought $20,000 worth of brick cash business; and returning home, did a brisk cash business; indeed, so great was his run of custom, that in a very short time, and before his debts were due, he was again in the city making purchases on as still more extensive scale. This time his bills amounted to about $30,000 in Baltimore, and perhaps as much in Philadelphia. When he reached home, he had a considerable portion of the boxes conveyed to his residence, telling his clerks it would be more convenient for him to make them there. But these, it seems, were never destined to enter his store. In the meantime there was a great rush of customers to his establishment; never, said they, were such bargains sold before; and the money flowed in, and the goods flowed out, until the rest of the merchants in the vicinity were struck with amazement. Stevens not only monopolized the business, but vented his wares at prices below the original cost. This it continued until his stock was exhausted, when his father-in-law, who had been some time preparing to emigrate to the South, despatched his boxes of furniture, &c., in wagons for the Ohio river, which were soon followed by the son-in-law. The boxes, it was ascertained, contained the valuable merchandise sent to Stevens' dwelling, which he now urged forward with all possible expedition, until he reached Parkersburg. Here the goods were shipped, but the Captain refusing to take his horses on board, Stevens was forced to take them southward himself, (Texas being his destination) to a point where he should fall in with his goods. But during the time this ball was rolling southward, a gentleman having giving information of the facts to his creditors here, several of his heaviest depositors set off in pursuit, among whom was one as large as he who first set the great "ball in motion."

The pursuing party arrived at Cincinnati, with no further tidings of the defaulter, than those related at Parkersburg. Nevertheless, not being ignorant of the G. T. note, one was despatched to New Orleans to intercept him, should he not be overhauled before reaching that port, while the rest cruised about in different directions. When looking over the register at one of the Cincinnati hotels, and almost despairing of finding any other clue to the runaway, one of the Baltimoreans accidentally cast his eye to a spot where a name of some length had been erased; and that of Frazer written over it. With some difficulty, but yet with certainty, he made out the partially erased name to be Stevens! Instantly departing in the direction Mr. Frazer was travelling, which was Texasward, he heaved in view of him at Louisville, as he was Swartwatering along down the falls. There the chase became desperate, and Mr. Stevens compromised the matter by paying his pursuer the amount of his demands; but the large gentleman alluded to, coming up soon after, the ball was finally stopped and lodged behind an iron grating. At the last advice one of the Baltimoreans had started up the river to intercept the father-in-law's furniture, whilst the other remained, with the son-in-law in custody.—Balt. Sun.

Arrest of the Texian Ambassador.—The following report of the proceedings of the Superior Court in New York on Wednesday, before a full bench, we take from the Courier and Enquirer. The Hon. J. Pinckney Henderson, Envoy Extraordinary from the Government of Texas to the Court of France, arrived in this city by the British Queen, on Saturday last. He was on Monday arrested for debt at the suit of Messrs. L. Holbrook & Co. dry goods dealers in Pine street, and for want of the requisite bail, was committed under custody of the Sheriff. A motion was made in the Superior Court by his counsel, L. Lord, J. Esq., for his release, on the ground that a Foreign Ambassador was, under the law, exempted from all liability of arrest for debt and in support of his position, Mr. Lord produced in evidence the credentials of Genl. Henderson, and a treaty entered into through his agency, between the Governments of France and Texas.

The motion was opposed by M. S. Bidwell, Esq., counsel for the plaintiff. He contended that the law of nations exempting from arrest foreign agents and ambassadors, intended only to apply to their residence in such countries as they were commissioned to visit, and to ensure their safety in their journey from and their return to their own country; and inasmuch as the mission of the defendant had no reference to this country, and it not being a necessary part of his route, he was as much liable to arrest as any other individual. The subject was argued at length by counsel on both sides; and numerous authorities cited both in favor of and against the motion. The result was, that the Court announced that a decision would be given on Friday.

Public Lands.—From a report made to the Legislature of New York, it appears that the public lands of the United States, to which the Indian title has not been extinguished, are estimated at 766 million acres 548 million of which lie east, and 218 millions west of the Rocky Mountains. That the public lands to which the Indian title has been extinguished, are estimated at 319,536,232 acres; of this amount, 12,690,334 have been given away by Congress to the States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Missouri, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Michigan, Arkansas, and the Territories of Florida, Wisconsin and Iowa; and 77,133,821 were sold, up to the 30th Sept. 1856; leaving a balance of 229,711,075 acres now owned and subject to the immediate disposition of the United States. These lands were derived from three sources: First, land holden by the King of England previous to the Revolution, and which by right of conquest, by the force of the Revolution, and treaty of peace of 1783, became the property of certain of the thirteen States, and which, about the time of the adoption of the Constitution of the United States, was ceded to Government by several of the thirteen States; secondly, the Territory of Louisiana bought of France; and thirdly, East and West Florida, ceded to us by Spain.

Respected friend Dr. Swayne—I am truly indebted to you for the benefit I have received from the use of your Compound-Syrup of Wild Cherry, which I confess was the means of restoring my health. I was attacked with a common cold, which terminated in a seated asthma upon the lungs, at length became much debilitated from constant coughing and loss of appetite, and gave up all hope of recovering, as many of my family had been carried off by consumption. Being recommended by a friend of mine, Mr. Weaver, to make trial of your invaluable Syrup, I did so, which ended in performing a perfect cure. I have much to say to you which I see you, which will be this fall. Keep up these lines if you think proper, that those afflicted may find relief from the same source.—Yours truly, JAMES PARRY. Acute Bronchitis, a forerunner of Consumption.—This disease is very much like a common catarrh, it generally commences like an ordinary cold, with lassitude, chilliness, slight cough and oppression and tightness about the breast. In advanced stages it is attended with a very serious character. As the disease continues the oppression in the breast increases, the countenance becomes expressive of anxiety, the respiration becomes more and more laborious, sometimes wheezing or rattling sound, as if the air was forced through a narrow aperture clogged with a viscid fluid. To neglect this disease it may be of serious consequences, but by a timely application to Dr. Swayne's Compound Syrup of Wild Cherry, with a strict attention to the nature of the subject, the effects will be removed. But should it be at no place except at No. 19 North Eighth st. or at the respective agents. For sale by J. J. MYERS & CO.

POSTSCRIPT. From Washington. We learn from the Baltimore American of Tuesday morning, that the House met at 13 o'clock on Monday. The Clerk proceeded to call over the list, commencing with Maine and proceeded without interruption until he came to New Jersey, when he desired the action of the House as to whether he should proceed to call over either of the claimants or pass them over entirely for the present. This brought on an animated discussion which was going on at the time the mail left in the evening. 210 members were in attendance. Either Mr. Pickens of S. Carolina, or Mr. Lewis of Alabama, it is thought would be the administration candidate for Speaker. When the House would become organized, was a matter of doubt, until that was accomplished, however, the President's Message would not be sent in. An immense crowd of spectators, it is said, were in attendance.
