Gentlemen-we have seen our opponents denounce Military Chieftains when they were candidates of our party. We have seen, ngain, these same opponents select as their own candidate, when we chanced to have one of civil qualifications as ours, a military chieftain, and proclaim him every way worthy of the whole suffrages of the people of our coun-These, gentlemen, are facts notorious to all of us and to the whole community.-We have witnessed the denunciation of our principles; we have witnessed the preservation of those same principles by our opponents; we have witnessed the avowal of one set of principles at one period and another at another. And the last farce which our opponents have played before our nation is their disavowal of all principle, and a declaration that they would oppose us without any avowal of principle on their part whatever. Thus arming themselves like gueril-las, they seem to have instructed their leaders to attack their opponents at any point, or on any principle that they might deem most expedient. And thus by a system—by man—but we give General Harrison's own a kind of war of out-posts, it is calculated opinion of it. In the 10th volume of Niles' that a degree of annoyance may be inflicted upon us by seizing upon each local question, side, and then on another point on that side, extract: and that thus they may expose us to a diparty, and give them the victory.

But, gentlemen, we are called upon, on the present occasion, to guard ourselves aainst the machinations of our opponents --We discover distinctly the game that they are playing-the artillery they contemplate to bring to bear upon us. It is our duty to guard against it. The principles at issue are the same. We have the same enemy to contend with. They have only changed even his opponents being judges He has faithfully and successfully carried out those principles which he himself avowed, and which were advocated by the party who placed him in nomination, and elected him to the station which he now holds, and that too with a fidelity and firmness which has astonished and called forth the admiration of the whole community. The party, not only in our own state, but throughout the Union, are probably as thoroughly united in support of his measures and in the approbation to which they consider him entitled for the honesty and firmness with which he has carried out the principles of the great democratic party, as they have ever been in favor of any one selected to fill so important

In 1835, by an unfortunate division in our ranks, we suffered the administration of the state to pass into the hands of our opponents. At the expiration of three years, our party having united, we met our opponents on the election ground and succeeded in utterly defeating them; notwithstanding our opponents resorted to measures which I presume the great mass of themselves would not now undertake to approve at an election. Yet, even, when the election had terminated and they were defeated, there was reluctance manifested to yield to the expressed will of the public—a reluctance which I regret has too often manifested itself in that party—a disregard for public sentiment, declared in the manner expressed by our constitution and laws. [Great and reiterated applause.] And it is known to those whom I address (for the event is of recent occurrence) that a disregard of the constitution and laws, on that occasion had almost driven us to the verge of a civil war. This circumstance, then, ought to urge upon us the necessity of harmony, united councils and united action, so that we may avoid even the appearance of having done any thing in contravention of or calculated to endanger the constitution and the laws. And if united, gentlemen, I have no hesitation in saying—I have no doubt in asserting it with confidence, that success will attend you. We have a majority in our native state, and they are ready to act with us on subjects touching on the welfare of our community. When united we never can
