The Blood has hitherto been considered by The Blood has hitherto been considered by Empirics and others, as the great regulator of the human system, and such is the devoted of the adherents to that erroneous doctrine, that they content themselves with the simple possession of this fallacious opinion, without enquiring into the primary sources from whence Life, Health, and Vigor-emanate, and, vice versa pain, sickness, disease and death. Not so with Dr. Hunt, whose extensive research and practical experience so eminently qualify him for the profession of which he has been one of the most useful members. He contends—and a moment's r. flection will convince any reasoning mindof the correctness of his views—that the stomach, liver, and the associated organs are the primary correctness of his views—that the stomach, liver, and the associated organs, are the primary and great regulators of health, and that the blood in very many instances is dependent on these organs, and that unless medicine reaches THE ROOT OF THE DISEASE, the superficial anadynes usually prescribed, serve but as foils to cover the ravages of deep-rooted includies—Under these convictions, at the expense of ye to of close application, the doctor has discovered a medicine whose searching powers are irresistible, and in prescribing it is with a knowledge of its being a radical cure in the various diseases already cummerated, even if applied in the most critical cases, but he does not pretend to ascribe ritical cases, but he does not pretend to ascribe
