TO THE PUBLIC.

In many instances the disease seems at first or no very serious character. As the disease continues the oppression in the breast increases, the countenance becomes expressive of anxiety the respiration becomes more and more laborious, sometimes wheezing or rattling sound, as they may not be misled by the tales of those who are prone to repeat, with embellishments, every idle story as undoubted truth. What motive could have actuated Mr. Klepfer to avow that the note which I held upon him was fraudulently obtained and without consideration, is not for me to enquire of declare. It is quite a month for the purpose of removing from me month for the countenance becomes the disease seems at first on novery serious character.

fraudulently obtained and without consideration, is not for me to enquire of declare. It is quite enough for the purpose of removing from me every suspicion of fraud, that the subject has undergone a judicial investigation before the Court of Common Pleas of this country, where the validity of the note in question was established by a weight of evidence which ought to mantle with the blush of shame the cheek of Christian Klepfer, who by affidavit denied that it had been procured from him honestly. The depositions read in evidence are on file in the Prothonotary's office, and if any of Mr. Klepfer's friends are inclined to give credence to what he has said or may say. I only ask them to go and read the written evidence and he will be convinced that he has been employing his "unruly member" in such a way as to add noth-'unruly member" in such a way as to add nothing to his reputation as a man of honor or ho esty. SHORT FACTS.

TO THE AFFLICTED. I is sometimes urged that the Rheumatism cannot be cured by external applications. This may be true sometimes; but it is also certainly true that this dirtressing complaint can-not be cured by internal remedies, except by their long and constant use, by which perhaps, at the same time the system becomes generally deranged, debilitated and destroyed. Even were not this the case how shall the great distress of the sufferer be alleviated while such slow and doubtful remedies have their effect? The answer is plain, candid and most true—use
