to provide for disciplining the militia: a construction which, to say the least of it, is extremely doubtful; for the same-sentence of the Constitution which reserves to the States respectively the authority of training the militia, directs also that it should be done ac urday last, the 22d inst., for the purpose of cording to the discipline prescribed by Congress, thus excluding, as it would seem by used the two terms in the same sense. "Mr. Poinsett seems to have been more sensibly impressed with this obstacle than William Kutz, Adam Lehman, his predecessors, and endeavors to over Gilbert Seanight, Adam Perfer, come it by placing his chief reliance on vol- JACOB DEARDORFF, MICHL. BELTSHOOVER, States themselves. But can the constitutional objection be thus avoided? Can Congress appropriate money for objects to which their authority does not extend?

"A proposition was made several years since to meet the objection fully by amending the Constitution and giving Congress power to provide for training the militia concurrently with the States, and to subject them to the rules and regulations to which they are by law subjected when in the service the United States; and to provide for teaching in the primary schools and seminaries of learning throughout the Union, the system of discipline prescribed for the mili-tia. This proposition does not appear to have found favor either with Congress or with the people.

"It is but lately that my attention has been particularly drawn to this subject, and, as there is no doubt that the great men to whom I have alluded contemplate an organization of the militia, and provisions for its better instruction, embracing substantially the principles contained in Mr. Poinsett's plan; it becomes me, in the face of so much apparent authority, to hesitate before I pronounce definitely upon its constitutionality. I shall, I am confident, in the opinion of all candid minds, best perform my duty by refraining to do so, untill it becomes necessary to act officially in the matter. In the mean time. I will content myself with saying, that the inclination of my mind is, that the desired measure cannot be safely accomplished, in the form proposed, under the Federal Constitution, as it stands.

'Having thus given you the best opinions that I have been able to form of the important subjects to which you have called my attention, you will, I hope, allow me to notice briefly one or two collateral considerations.

"Mr. Poinsett's uncontroverted account of the origin and progress of his plan is before you. He shows that it grew out of the request made of him by the Committee on the Militia of the House of Representatives, at the close of the session before the last, in contemplation of a possible collision between this country and Great Britain, and that it was matured and drawn forth under a call made upon him by the House at the last session. Some surprise has been expressed and doubts appear even to be entertained of the correctness of his declaration, that the plan was not seen by me, or admitted to my consideration, before it was communicated to Congress. Those who take this view of the subject entirely overlook the fact, that such is almost invastify the case on all similar occasions, and that in replying to calls made upon them by either branch of the Legislature, the heads of Departments act for Congress, and not for the President; except only on occasions where his acts are brought in question. The impracticability of pursuing a different course, if even it were otherwise desirable, will be appreciated, when it is considered how very numerous these calls have recently been, amounting as they have done to two hundred and twenty at a single session, independently of those made on the President himself, and of letters from committees, requiring great research, and the preparation of voluminous documents. Unfair as these animadversions are thus shown to be, this has not been even the worst aspect in which they have been presented. We have been compelled to see, not, I should think with mortification on the part of every ingenious mind, whatever may be his political preferences, the names of respectable citizens subscribed to statements, that I had in my an nual message expressed my approbation of a plan, which not only never had been submitted to me, but was not even matured until more than three months after the message was sent too Congress; and an attempt to prove the unfounded assumption by the publication of a garbled extract from that docuthemselves, being nothing less than an attempt to fix upon me the design of establish. Many of them were armed with clubs, and they swore they back, took their hard cider flag from them and tore it in pieces.

One of these bullies attacked a democrat and got a highly respectable drubbing for his. insolence.

The ruffians followed the democrats around all day, and took every means to insult tion, the settlement of which England, was and annoy them. They hired boys to hiss in the street. To cap the climax, in the evening they ongregated in front of Con. Jourson's lodgngs, where insulting speeches were made by Brown and Mathiot, and every indignity of fered to the scarred hero of the Thames.

One would suppose that the five scars borne by Col.
