

AMERICAN VOLUNTEER.

BY GEO. SANDERSON.

Now our flag is hung to the wild wind free, Let it float o'er our father land— And the guard of its spotless fame shall be, Columbia's chosen band.

CARLEISLE:

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 18, 1841.

FOR GOVERNOR IN 1841, DAVID R. PORTER.

Subject to the decision of a State Convention

THE VETO MESSAGE.—Governor Porter's Veto Message of the bill relating to the Canal Commissioners, will be found on our first page, to which we invite particular attention. It is a production of the real Golden Stamp, and will win for his Excellency golden opinions every where.

The Veto on the Bill appropriating money to pay the Banks who loaned money to Gov. Ritner in 1838, will be found on the opposite page.

On Dit.—Rumor has it that Mr. Ewing is to go into the Treasury Department, and that Mr. Grant, of N. York, is to be the Postmaster General. It is also reported that Mr. Penrose is to be Solicitor of the Treasury.

More Suspensions.—The Baltimore Banks suspended on Monday week, after paying specie for the very lengthy period of six days! Rumor says that the Gettysburg, York and Chambersburg banks, have followed the lead of the "Great Regulator," and are again in a state of glorious suspension.

Two weeks from to-day Gen. Harrison will be inaugurated President of the United States, and enter upon that work of glorious "reform" which his friends held out to the people before the election.

What measures he will recommend, or what benefits will result to the country from his administration, are of course still in the womb of futurity; but we cannot help thinking, judging from the past, that not a few of the good people of these United States, will regret the day they assisted in placing in power another federal administration. Gen. Harrison may, for aught we know to the contrary, have a disposition to do what is right—but can he do it? He will be surrounded by those who have no interest in common with the mass of the people. Such men as Webster and Clay, the representatives of stock-jobbers and British bankers, will be the power behind the throne—and they will mould and fashion the old gentleman to suit their own purposes of aggrandizement. He will be a mere puppet in their hands, and they will compel him to move and act at their bidding. We do not wish to condemn the new administration in advance—but we shall be much mistaken, indeed, if a very short time will not suffice to convince the most sceptical that the change has been decidedly for the worse, and that Whig reform is the veriest humbug imaginable.

Baltimore Market.—The Baltimore Sun of Saturday last says: The market for Howard street flour is a little firmer than at last week's rates, and in some instances sales have been made at an advance of 3 to 6 cents; but generally the price is $4.50 for good common brands from stores, and $4.37 the receipt price. Beef is worth from 6 to 87, and pork $5.75 per 100 lbs. Whiskey is selling at 18 cents per gallon from wagons.

The New York Banks.—The New York papers publish a table of the condition of all the Banks of that State. In the city there are eighteen banks, and they have a circulation and deposits of more than $14,000,000, while their specie does not amount to $4,000,000—and yet these are the heartless and ungrateful institutions which it is alleged, abstracted $6,000,000 from the vaults of the U. States Bank and caused it to suspend!

WAR SPIRIT IN MAINE.—Resolutions have been introduced into the Legislature of Maine, appropriating the specific sum of $400,000, to enable the Governor to take immediate measures to remove the British troops from the disputed territory.

U. S. SENATOR.—Governor Woodbridge (Fed.) has been elected U. S. Senator from Michigan, in place of the Hon. John Norvell, whose term expires on the 3d of March.

The report of the Committee on Foreign Affairs, in the U. S. House of Representatives, touching the late difficulties in relation to the burning of the Caroline, was presented on Saturday last. The report is spoken of as a bold, fearless and independent one—such as may probably lead to war between this country and Great Britain.

THE BURSTING OF THE BUBBLE.

Those who have been such strenuous advocates of a bloated credit system, under the fostering care of the Great Regulator, are now realizing the effects of that system in full measure; and the speculators in stocks are swamped in the mire of their own folly up to the eyebrows. The New York correspondent of the National Intelligencer gives a most gloomy picture of the condition of things among the mercantile portion of the community in that city; and says that "some of the stockholders, who had sold United States Bank stock on time, when it was 50 and upwards, were unable to fulfil their contracts." Go it, Tip—come it, Tyler. How admirable has confidence been restored, credit been re-established, business revived, and the prices of produce and wages been increased by the election of Tippecanoe and Tyler too.—Baltimore Republican.

Exploring Expedition.—A letter from an officer of the Peacock, dated Honolulu, Sandwich Islands, Oct. 30th, says: "It is probable that so soon as the survey will permit the Squadron will commence the survey of the N. W. coast of America and Columbia River, which will be a long and tedious business, and not until its completion will our fleet return homeward."—Ball. Rep.

WHAT A FALL!—The U. S. Bank has petitioned the Legislature for relief. "Wonderful, the sways and changes!" A few years ago, and this institution was considered powerful enough to spend hundreds of thousands in buying up Senators and Representatives, Editors and Statesmen—now it is a poor mendicant for legislative pity; a humble suppliant for mercy at the hands of some of those very men from whom it once bought its character!

WHAT SHOULD BE DONE?

This interrogatory is in the mouth of every one since the recent suspension, but a great diversity of opinion exists as to the proper remedy for the diseased entity. Some suggest one thing, some another—while very many are of the opinion that there has been too much legislation on the subject already, and that the Banks ought now to be left to the operation of the laws already in force.—This latter opinion, so far as our information extends, prevails very generally with the Democratic party in this country. There are a few, it is true, who think differently; but we are satisfied that the great mass—the bone and sinew—are averse to any further legislation in favor of these institutions, and particularly to any enactment which would go to bolster up that rotten concern, the U. S. Bank. The opinion is very generally entertained that the "Monster" has been the direct and palpable cause of the three suspensions which have cursed the Commonwealth, and that if it was removed the other Banks would be able to get along without any serious difficulty. This appears to be the prevailing sentiment of a large majority of the people—and it is not confined exclusively to the Democratic party. There are many of the opposition who have at length got their eyes opened, and are now uttering curses "loud and deep" against this hopelessly insolvent "Regulator."

We are of the opinion that the country Banks generally are in a solvent condition, and that they still enjoy a considerable degree of public confidence—and we believe further that there is no disposition whatever to make a run upon them. All that is necessary for them, is to cut loose their ill-fated connexion with the United States Bank, and show to the world that they are willing to carry out the design of their creation, by serving the different communities in which they are located. Let them do this, and the people will sustain them. But let their destinies be again interwoven with those of the "Monster"—let them and their friends seek a continuance of the untimely assistance, which is so injurious to the interests of the people, and it requires no prophet to foretell that in a short time the whole system must go by the board.

The Democratic party is not, as has been falsely asserted, opposed to a well regulated system of banking; they go for the credit system, so far as it can be made subservient to the interests of the people and beneficial to the country. But, as a party, the Democrats are opposed to the continuance of a swindling heartless corporation, which in its own struggles for an unhealthy existence seeks to plunge all the other Banks in the same vortex of destruction: they are also opposed to the alternate suspensions and resumptions of the last four years, and are unwilling that the community shall any longer be cursed with an irredeemable paper currency.

We have thus given our opinion, and the opinion, we believe, of the generality of our readers, as to what ought to be done—or rather, we should have said, what ought not to be done at the present crisis. The Federalists, however, have a majority in both branches of the Legislature, and we have very little doubt but that they will again prop up the U. S. Bank, legalize the suspension, and give the Banks authority to issue one, two and three dollar notes. What course the Governor will take on the subject, remains to be seen. His is a situation of great difficulty—but we think with our Harrisburg correspondent, that he is equal to the emergency.

Election.—The election in New Hampshire for Governor, members of Congress and State Senators, will take place on the second Tuesday of March.

McLeod.—Rumor says that the grand jury of Lockport have found a true bill for murder against this individual, and that his trial will come on early in the month of March.

The troubles of the Harrison party are commencing. On Saturday last, the Penrose and Stevens factions had a trial of strength in this borough, in the election of delegates to the county convention. We learn that considerable exertions were made on both sides, and that no little bitter feeling was engendered by the rival factions. The Stevens men, however, carried the day; they succeeded in electing their delegates by a handsome majority, and the Penrosians were fairly driven from the field. But this was not all. On Tuesday the County Convention assembled, and here again the Antimasonic influence was predominant. Although the Strohm, alias Penrose party, exerted themselves to the utmost—their efforts were in vain. The friends of Banks, alias the Stevens party, were in the majority; they selected delegates to the State Convention of their own stamp, and instructed them to support the nomination of John Banks. This result must be mortifying in the extreme to Mr. Penrose, who has thus been so signally foiled by his great rival in his own county.

A MARE'S NEST.

By accident, the clerk who copied the message of the Governor in relation to the Canal Commission bill, having before him, the pamphlet containing the old and new constitutions, in parallel columns, copied a sentence from the old instead of the new, the phraseology of which was a little different. The discovery was first made by the Governor himself, but before he could send into the legislature a correction, the Chronicle and a few others equally brilliant, raised a shout over the mare's nest. "Drowning men catch at straws."—Keynote.

THE UPROAR IN THE WHIG-WAM!

We clip the subjoined from the Harrisburg correspondence of the Pennsylvania: "You will see by the Whig and Anti-Masonic papers that war to the knife has been declared between these factions. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The true point in dispute is as to who shall get the spoils—it is a boxing match among the victorious crew, for the prize money. The hardest buffer gains it. A large army is convenient in the field; but after the fight, when the forces are meeting at the Harley-mow, to share the plunder and receive the pay, too many mouths are fed. The