I will not detain you with an account of my separation from those I held most dear—suffice it to say, that I received the blessings of my pa-rents, and in return, promised faithfully and honestly to avoid all bad company, as well as their vices. Had I kept my promise I should have been saved this shame, and been free from the load of guilt that hangs around me continually, like a fiendish vulture, threatening to drag me to justice, for crimes as yet unrevealed. But, to return, I left my early home, where all had been surshine and where my pathway had been streiwed and where my pathway had been strewed with flowers, to try my fortune among strangers, and to try my strength in buffeting the storms and tempests of the world. With a light heart I looked forward to for-tune;—and taking the usual route I soon would be extended to my case; but with a reached Wheeling; where I took passage on hope that my example, may be a warning to a boat for Louisville. On the boat a game other young men-that those who hear me of cards was proposed for amusement, and may, when asked to play a social game of although I had promised faithfully to avoid cards or drink a social glass, think of my such things, still, I argued to myself, there fate and refrain. They may feel themselves was no harm in playing a game for anuse-ment. Accordingly, I joined the party, and we kept up the anusement most of the way down. After we left Cincinnati, it was pro-be very much affected; and for a few mo-ment when they please; but let them remember that I argued thus until I was lost. [Here the defendant sunk down and appeared to be very much affected; and for a few mo-ment silence reined throughout the Court posed to bet a bit a game, merely, as it was said, to make it interesting. My first im-pression was to leave the table, but I was told that it was only a bit—that I could not loose more than one or two dollars. This he is for learning as a Judge, proceeded in argument prevailed, for I lacked inoral cour-age to do what was right. I feared my companions would say I was stingy of a lit-ite money.
