He grew up at the tavern door; his friends the horses and pos- tillions. One-fine morning, when he was fifteen young Murat mounted a horse and turned trooper. After a while he deserted and came to Paris, poor and almost destitute o clothing, and hired himself as a servant boy at an eating-house. This was at the time of the French revo- lution. Louis the 16th's throne had alread begun to totter. There were no more faith ful subjects—all Frenchmen were revolu- tionists. Murat entered heartily into the spirit of the Times, and declared himself	The people in that part of Mexico known as the 'Department of Santa Fe,' have for many years been harrassed and annoyed by the depredations of the American Indians. An American by the name of 'Karkur, at at the time of our visit, had just entered into contract with the government to whip-the Indians and bring them to a permanent treaty, for the sum of one hundred thousand dollars, part of which was paid to him in ad- vance, to commence operations. Kurkur is now carrying on the war, and his first skir- mishes occurred while we were at Toas within two miles of the town in which we were sujourning. His mind, on the contrary, is as sound as a bell, and his- head is as clear as when he used to be shov- elling in Spanish dollars by the ship load. Mr. Astor says that it cost him more la- bor and genius to make his first thousand dollars, than the millions that followed; and that now, were he a young man, he would rather undertake, at the hazard of losing his life, the risk of making one hundred thou- sand dollars on the foundation of one thou- sand, than one thousand out of nothing.
