[Correspondence of the Public Ledger.]] The Outrage against the Mormons-CARTHAGE TAKEN BY THE SHERIFF-A FIGHT-EIGHTEEN OR TWENTY ANTI-MORMONS KILLED.

- Springfield, Sept. 22, 1845. Gentlemen:-I have this day mailed to yo address a newspaper enclosing a copy of a Proclamation issued by the Governor on Saturday; it explains itself; and in addition to the reported outrages enumerated in it, we have further information from the seat of war, furnished by two gentlemen from Brown county, who arrived yesterday, and who state that Backenstos, the Sheriff of Hancock county, at the head of about 500 Mermons, well county, at the nead of about 500 Mermons, well armed, had taken Carthage, the county seat, and had got all the Anti-Mormon ringleaders in prison. They had a general engagement previously, in which eighteen or twenty Anti-Mormons were killed and some half dozen Mormons shared the same fate.

To-day, we have a report that Carthage has been burnt by the Mormons. Cols. E. D. Baker, and E. H. Merryman of this place, called a meeting for volunteers at the State House yesterday after-noon, at 3 o'clock at Sunday,) which adjourned to meet again to-day at 12. There was a very slim attendance however—there being but little interest manifested by the citizens of this place thus far; many seem to think the Anti-Mormons are as much to blame as the Mormons, and are willing they should fight it out. Orders have been issued to Gen. Hardin to take command of the troops, and if deemed expedient to declare martial law forthwith. The Governor has been for some days quite indisposed, but will proceed to the scene of trouble Yours, as soon as possible.

[From the Illinois State Register Extra.] We issue an extra for the purpose of furnishing the latest news from Hancock.

It appears that the Anti-Mormons continued their work of destruction until upwards of one hun-dred houses have been consumed. How He Won Her. We hope the moral of the following sketch will should study well the grand secret. Our friend who furnished the sketch says he sees no reason why it should not be true. A young lady of eccentric character, but of rare mental endowments and extraordinary personal at-tractions, had five suitors equally assiduous in their attentions. Unable to decide upon which sho would bestow her hand, she gave them notice to call upon her at a certain hour on a stated day, and each state his claims in the presence of the others. At the appointed time the lovers arrived. Four of them were confident of success, but the fifth had a lown cast look and sighed when he gazed upon the object of his devotion.

Gentlemen, said she, you have honored me with proposals of marriage. I have as yet, neither efused nor accepted any one of you. I now deire that each of you will state your claims to my carriages at your command, and enjoy all the luxuries of a fashionable life. I am rich

B spoke next:—"My rival has said very troly that he is rich, and he offers you a strong inducement; but I am of noble descent. My grandfather was a duke, and although not wealthy, I am of a family with whom an alliance would be thought ar honor by the wealthiest heiress in the land."

C stated his claims thus:—"I am a politician and have now a reputation that older persons have envied. Next year I shall ron for Congress, and I have no doubt of success. By marrying me, your name, will be handed down to posterity." D twisted his mustache, with an air of an exquisite, and said—"Angelic creature!—"Pon my soul I think you have already made up your mind in my favor. You know how demnably I'm admired. Who is the most lashionable dresser in town? Who rides the finest horses? Who frequents the most fashionable places? Who is a better judge

"Alas!" was the reply, "I yield to the gentlemen. They have the advantage of me in every respect." And he took up his hat to leave. "Stop," said the lady, "make your statement, no matter how humble may be your claims." "I am poor" "Go on.

"I am not of noble family"—
"Go on, sir."
"I am unknown to the world"—

"No matter—proceed,"
"I have neither the taste nor the means to dress love you to distraction!—I take four papers! ha! ha! ha!" augh, and exclaimed in one voice—so do we!-"Silence," said the lady. "In one month you shall have my answer. You may all withdraw."

At the end of the month the five suitors again appeared. Turning to each in succession the lady ius answered: thus answered:

"Riches are not productive of happiness."—

"Boasted nobility of blood is the poorest of all recommendations."

"Fame is fleeting." And that has but the garb of a gentleman is to be pitied." "I have taken the trouble to find out the names of the new spapers to which you all sub-names of the new spapers to which you all subscribe, and I have ascertained that none of you, who have beasted of wealth, notility, fame or jashion, have paid the printer! Now, gentlemen, this is diskonest! I cannot think of marrying a man who could be guilty of a dishonest act. I have learned that Mr. E. not only subscribes for a paper, but pays the printer! Therefore, I say, he is the man. I give him my hand with the full conviction that he is one who is never way acqualated. tion that he is one who is every way calculated to make me happy.

Need we extend our narrative? The disappointed gentlemen disappeared quite suddenly; and the lucky suiter was united to the object of his dovotion; and, in a few-years, by his honesty and industry, became, not only a distinguished, but a construction of the property of hidden wealthy man, and was esteemed by all who knew him. Young men, ho puid the printer! Is there no moral in this?

A word for Old Maids.

We know of nothing more disreputable in any nan than the heartless and unfeeling ridicule which is sometimes expended on that estimable class in society, the old maids. The writer of the following deserves the eternal gratitude of the sisterhood of sunsters, for the noble manner in which he breaks a lance in their favor;

Cartain young ladies seem to cherish a great he

We learn that he has raised about five the other days. There go two old maid hundred mon from Nauvoo, all well armed, with sisters. And what if they were maids, and old, which he had disposed the rioters, commanded by Col. Williams, at Green Plains.

In this affair no lives were lost, as the "Anties" ran and took shelter in a cornfield, before the posses. she is destitute of those endowments of pers and mind, and heart which are adapted to render her attractive and loveable. It is among the pos-sibilities of life, that a lady should prefer the independence of a single life to the chances of improving condition by uniting her fortune with that of any man. It is yet more probable that a-lady failing to receive the add resses of any man whom she could respect and love, should have so much taste and heart as to refuse every other offer. It has been our good fortune to know many estimable married ladies; but we verily believe that we can match every one of them with an 'old maid' equal-ly estimable and we have seen a poor broken-spir-ited wife, teased and tormented by a half dozen children, or ill treated by a cross and unfeeling husband, we have been tempted to think that after all, to be an old maid is not the worst ill that can

And no one feels the death of a child as a moth-And no one reers the death of a child as a moth-have been received at this place from any of the Mormon party since the commencement of these troubles, except one-from a very obscure man in Nauvoc, and another from McDonough county, and no newspapers. It is runored that the mails have been storned, and there is a start affect that loss, weeping over crushed hopes, and a chain of wounded affections. But the mother feels that one has been taken away who was still closer to the heart. Hers has been the office of constant ministration. Every gradation of feature was de-veloped before her eyes. She has detected every new gleam of intelligence. She heard the first utterance of every-new word. She has been the refuge of his fears; the supply of his wants. And every task of affection has woven a new link, and made dear to her its object. And when he dies, a portion of her own life, as it were, dies. How canshe give him up with all these memories, these as-sociations? The timid hands that have so often taken hers in trust and love, how can she fold them on his breast, and give them up to the cold clasp of death? The feet whose wandering she has watched so narrowly, how can she see them straightened to go down into the dark valley? The head she has pressed to her lips and her bosom, that she has watched in burning sickness and in peaceful slumber, a hair of which she could not. see harmed, O! how can she consign it to the cham-ber of the grave? The form that not for one night has been beyond her vision or her knowledge, how can she put it away for the long night of the sepulchre, to see it no more? Man has cares and tolls that draw away his thoughts and employ them; she sits in loneliness, and all these memories, all these suggestions, crowd upon her. How can she hear all this? She could not, were it not that her faith is as her affection; and if the one is more deep and tender than in man, the other is more simple and spontaneous, and takes confidently hold of the tiand of God .- Rev. SLANDER.—That's right my boy, take the part of a friend who is traduced in his absence. If over yone were as unwilling to listen to a tale of slander, it would be impossible to utter a word against another. Pursue the same course, through life. and he determined at least, that your ears shall be shut ngainst bad insinuations and vile slanderings If no one would listen to a repreachful word of his neighbor, the fire of the hateful passion would be extinguished, and no one would be
