GENTLE WORDS.

A young rose in summer time
[a beautiful to me,
And glorious the many stars
That glimmer on the sea:
But gentle words and loving hearts,
And lands to clasp my own
Are better than the brightest flowers
Or stars that over shone!

The sun may warm the grass to life,
The dew, the drooping flower,
And eyes grow bright and watch the light
Of autum's opening hour—
But words that breathe of tenderness,
And smiles we know are true,
Are warmer than the sunimer time,
And brighter than the dew.

It is not much, the world can give,
With all its subtle art,
And gold and gems are not the things
To satisfy the heart;
But oh! if these who clustered round
The altar and the hearth,
Have gentle words and loving smiles,
How beautiful is earth!

THE WHITE PLUME.

THE WHITE PLUME.

BY MRS. MARY N. MACDONALD.

"And this is your latest style, Mrs. Jerold?"

"The very latest importation, ma'am, received by the Abadia on Wednesday. A most beautiful thing, I assure you, and so becoming. Nothing prettier this season. It will be quite the rage, I fancy. Will you try, it, Mrs. Douglass? or stay, I have another that may snit you better," and the obsequious iniliant may snit you better," and the obsequious iniliant from this table?"

"You must not despair, Annette," she said kindly while her own handserchief wiped the tears from the check of her. protege, "keep a good heart, my child, and Mrs. Jerold assured her customer it should not be exhibited to any one until she had decided, and with a weak and unworthy desire to outshine an associate, Mrs. Douglass swept out of the show-room, which was fast filling up, and where Mrs. Jerold and her assistant, Miss Gâle, were now fully occupied. Our. heroline, however, did not pass into the street without interruption, for at the foot of the starrease. She encountered Mrs. Langley, who, unmindful of the glare and glitter above, was speaking words of the glare and glitter above, was speaking words of the more moved about among bonnet stands and ribbon boxes. "It was carried down stairs, Mrs. Jerold: Miss Willet felt too unwell to come up to the show food, and though all is so dark now, God will send us light bonnet. Pray, send Annette to fetch Miss Gale."—And Mrs. Jerold, having given this order, returned to her favorite customer, the very pretty, and very much admired, Mrs. Douglass. "I am sure," she said, with the volubility necessary and usual upon such occasions, "you will consider this the most ergologies of the stable of
