a single hinge, and threatening to fall on the heads of the passers-by. Behind the house is a garden, which, although small is divided into two by a hedge row of withered thorns.

In this house lived two brothers, who had kept up a constant and bitter emmity for fourteen years. As in the garden, so also in the house, every thing was divided into two parts, from the garret window down to the little cellar. The trap-door was open; but in the cellar below, each of the brothers had his own stores, shut off by laths, and locked up. Padlocks were put on all the doors, as if an attack of thieves were hourly expected. The stables belonged to one brother, and the shed to the other; not a word was spoken in the house, except an occasional eath, muttered by one of the brothers were named, were advanced in years, and both were single.—Conrad had been married, but his wife had died early —and Michael had always remained a bachelor.

CUBA AND THE UNITED STATES.

It has long been hinted in certain quarters, that there is a disposition on the part of the inhabitants of Coba, to have that island attached to the United States. We, ourselves; conversed during last spring, with a rich planter at St. Jago, who declared to a that the reports of this feeling on the part of his to contrymen were well founded; that in the vicinity of his home, a majority of the planters favored such a disposition of the island, as should speedily bring it within the control, and under the protection of our tropublican institutions. We are hence, not surprised to see in the New York Sun, the following article from the pen of Mr. Beach who passed the Most and state darptimed the treviously crossed the Ro Grands, into Gran in one another; and the parson laid his hand upon them to bless the act.

It was now Tom Watson's turn to give an account of Little with a rich planter at St. Jago, who declared to na, follows:

"My wife gave me the most unlucky command in that the reports of this feeling on the part of his lome, a majority of the planters favored such done so, they went into the garden, and levelled the "Do break your rotton neck—do Tom!"

"Ill be hanged if I do Kate,! said I, gathering were destroyed, all token of their former discord had instanting the cash for you. This is the last of himself, which he did with a very long lace as follows:

"My wife gave me the most unlucky command in the world, for, as I was blundering about up stairs in the dark, she cried out—

"Do break your rotton neck—do Tom!"

"I'll be hanged if I do Kate." said I, gathering myself up, "I'll sooner pay the bill." And so here, landlord is the east for you. This is the last time I'll risk 'five dellars on the command of my long."
