We would be sorry to see the brave old General in such company, but we would be most liappy to give him our votes as the capitate of the American Democracy in National Convention assembled, for President of the Union.

6. Resorved, That we approve of the tariff of '46 s—we consider it more just and equal in its protection and encouragement of the different branches of productive industry, than any former system of duties hitherto imposed. Experience has proved that ample protection is given to our manufacturers. In place of being paralized and destroyed, they are re-invigorated and sustained, whilst our farmers are receiving a return for their labor and capital, in an increased price for their products, effected by the wise policy of our national administration, in meeting the liberal system recently adopted by England, in a spirit of generous reciprosity and thus creating a foreign market for our naricultural products, without, which that important of the productive industry that the control of the control of the productive industry that a spirit of generous reciprosity and thus creating a foreign market for our naricultural products, without, which that important of the productive industry that the productive industry that the productive industry that the productive industry that the productive industry the productive industry that the product is a part of the productive industry that the productive industry that the product is producted to the product of the productive industry. but it contains a long report of the majority of the Committee of Foreign Relations of the Mexican Congress, to which Mr. Buchanan's letter referred.
