In our last we published the card of Professor McClintock, and also an answer to it by "A Witness," and we expressed the hope that the discussion might end with those communications. We are gratified to learn that such is likely to be the case, and that no further strife will ensue among the parties concerned in the matter. Our only object in publishing the card of Prof. McC. and the answer to it, was that both sides might be heard. This is the fair course for a paper to pursue-it places the parties on the same footing-and is proof to the public, we should think, that we were not disposed to suffer our columns to be used by one party to the injury of

The victory which it is our pleasure this day to announce, says the Democratic Union, is one which must inspire the heart of every true patriot with feelings of the most profound respect for the sterling honesty, and undoubted patriotism of the great mass of the people of the glorious old Keystone State.

Elsted with their temporary success in the Congressional elections in many of the Democratic States, the Federalists determined to make Pennsylvania the battle ground of the Union, and every device which the genius of that most artful, though unfortunate the genius of that most artful, though infortunate achool of politicians, could suggest, was resorted to, aided by a small body of factious, disorgenizing, restless spirits, who have heretofore had a place in the Democratic ranks, in order to defeat the regular nominee of the Democratic party. But the honest the Democratic ranks, in order to defeat the regular momines of the Democratic party. But the honest voters of this Commonwealth have given them such a robuke as must make them hing their faces for very shame, and admit that they are unworthy the confidence of his high-minded and honorable community. Therefore a party had conducted this campaign as it the Federal party had conducted this campaign as they have sometimes conducted campaigns, discussing the principles of their party openly and fairly with the Democracy, they would have been entitled at least to the respect of hondrable men, but when they entirely abandon the field of argument and resort to low, personal villifierably, least-neketering bargains, with all the fig ends of factions, both they have any them that phoches fall to bet who never have any to pay their honest debts, the whole town and their allies must be looked upon with contempt, by all honorable politicians; and place them at so low on ceby that, it will require a life-time of good conduct to give them any, thing like a respectable of the figerand position, as the position, as the position, as the position, as fall the people are well the faces of many of them would have been a fine model for an artist desirous of painting Balshass, are fall to prove the many thing like a respectable of the faces of many of them would have been a fine model for an artist desirous of painting Balshass, and place them are solved to give them any, thing like a respectable of the faces of many of them would have been a fine model for an artist desirous of painting Balshass, and trading or the worth provers and they procedure the faces of many of them would have been a fine model for an artist desirous of painting Balshass, and place them at so low or the provers and the faces of many of them would have been a fine model for an artist desirous of painting Balshass, and place them at so low or the proverse of the pro d to his memory, and sensitive as to any wrong bargains, with all the fug ends of factions, both they offered to him. Fortunately, the rascally act met a gain their allies must be looked upon with contempt, and their allies must be looked upon with contempt,

The heavy rain two weeks since has stripped many many forces, have sustained heavy damage by the loss of their corn. From the Herald of last week we gather of the following particulars of the damage sustained by Wn. M. Watts, the enterprising proprietor of Law of Forge in Diexinson township:

The capacions dam at his works which has been redected. Governor of generous emulation to out do its former efforts, and bring back the palmy days of Democracy's undisputed and harmonious in action, and determined in purpose.

They are generally delicate men, unaccustomed to exposure, having been roured in refinement, and accustomed to all the comforts and uxuries of life. This made them afraid that the wind might chill them, or that if it should rain, before they get back home, it might give them, the rheumatism, or probably a cold that would carry them to their grave.

With all honorable men, I feel assured, this explanation will be perfectly satisfactory;—indeed I know it will with the more refined classes. My friends however promise, that at the next election, they will do better: Provid.d, nevertheless, that the day is warm and sunny, and they can venture out, with perfect safety.
