MISCELLANEOUS. MAJOR ANDRE'S DEFENCE. A correspondent of the Newark Daily Advertiser, who seems to be fortunate in the possession of sundry curious old papers and other documents, has furnished for the columns of that paper a document which we do not remember to have ever seen before.

down to posterity with exceeding great distinction on the page of history; and if humbly and honorably mark their names on the page of each and all of you, will be remembered by both nations when they have grown greater and more powerful than they now are.

Oh, thus, from whose rank breath, nor sex can save, Nor sacred virtue, nor the powerless gear, Nor crown, nor sceptre, nor the golden throne, nor sceptre, nor the golden throne.

DOMESTIC HAPPINESS. All is so refreshing, so soothing, so satisfying, as the placid joys of home.

Behold the man of science—he drops the laborious and painful research—closes his volume—smooths his wrinkled brow—leaves his study, and unbending himself steps to the open air.

The evening breeze—cool and soft, the golden sunsets, and lingering far into the evening hours, have all departed.

ABOUT FIVE YEARS ago I happened at a wedding in one of the back woods counties of Virginia, at the house of Major S. Being a stranger to the country, I was looking about me with curiosity.

There is a slight necessity with which we industriously iron our ourselves; a slight that never expands, whose iron never changes, whose iron never changes.
