RHUMATISM. This disease in its acute form is inflamation of the membranes of the joints, with a disposition to migrate or shift from one joint to another, or to certain internal organs, and especially to the membranes of the heart. In this form of rheumatism there is occasionally fever; the joints are much swillen and excessively painful. In the chronic variety they are no marked constitutional symptoms, but in most are no marked constitutional symptoms, but in man cases, particularly in debilitated habits, when the general health of the body has been deranged hype-vious disease or too great exertion of body or mind, a permanent distortion of the joints and crookedness

Messrs, Angrey & Dickson:—Gentleinen—Having recommended in my practice, and used in my own family. Thomson's Compound, Syrup of Tar and Wood Naphtha, I have no hesitation in saying that it is one of the hest preparations of the kind in use, and persons suffering from colds, coughs, affections of the very cannot use any medicine that will care or prevent consumption sooner than Thomson's Compound Syrup of Tar and Wood Naphtha.
