Poetical. WITHERED TREES. BY THE LATE MRS. JAMES ORAY.

What do, yo here, ye witherod trees 7 The win and the vernal rain, And the softening breath of the spring-tide breez Reviee ye not again 1 Why kig your leafless brainches spread O'ather fair bough's bud and bloom, And hang o'er the bright young sapling's head, Like prophecies of gloom 7

Why do ye stretch in the sumpy air, As if stripped by the wintry wind, And the light and Joy of Summer share, That ye cannot pay in kind? Why do ye cumber the smilling earth, And shadow the thick green grass 7 Make way for the young shrubs leafy mirth--Pass, from this bright world passt

There came a sigh from the withered boughs, A murnut, and a moan; Like a routing wind over the crisping shows In winter, was its tone. It seemed to ray, "A last to think "Orman's ingratitude; That we from his sight fare bid to shrink-We, moustches of the wood!

"We used to be as green and fair Ai the trees ye cherish now, Ahda crown of laves were wont to bear On every lofty bouch. We used to laugh in the pleasant sun, And bathe in. the heavy dow: Yhy gradge inta now our youth is gone---We linger yet in view 7

"We are lingering but like aged men, With hearts and passions cold; Would you scorn your own grey fathers, then, Because they have grown old? Ye hoak on them with a reverent look. Though bent and aged now, And read, as ye would read a book, The wisdom on sach brow.

"Do not those reverend parents teach That we must pass away? And may not we such lessons preach. Of slow but sure decay? When the fattering Spring winds wander by Those fair young leaves and flowers. We tell them with a low deep sigh. Their fate must bo as ours."
