From the Public Ledger, of Saturday.

The Verdict in Langfeld's Case—Guilty.

Yesterday morning, before ten o'clock, the Court of Oyer and Terminer assembled for the purpose of taking the verdict of the jury in the case of Charles Langfeld, charged with the murder of Catharine Rademacher. The jury were sent for and brought into Court, and in answer to an inquiry, announced that they had agreed upon their verdict. The prisoner was in Court, having been brought in about nine o'clock; he was somewhat pale, but bore himself firmly. Before the jury were called upon for their verdict, Judge King addressed the persons present upon the necessity of their restraining any manifestation of feeling, whatever the result of the verdict might be. The jury were then called upon for their verdict, and in obedience to the call, the foreman stood up, and in a firm voice said "Guilty of murder in the first degree." The prisoner anxiously regarded the jury, and was not able to understand the verdict; he, therefore, asked his counsel whether it was "innocent or guilty." They replied "guilty." He then inquired whether "he could not get a new trial." During the absence of the jury they had with them the coat and hat testified to have been worn by Langfeld on the night of the murder. The coat had been subject to the inspection of police officers, counsel and witnesses, and it was thought had been thoroughly examined in every part. Yet, strange to say, the jury made a most important discovery whilst the garment was with them. This was the existence of an inside pocket in the breast of the coat, the lining of which contained several spots of blood. Mr. Rademacher, in his evidence, says that when he was woke up, and was engaged in a struggle with the murderer, the latter had not any weapon; he struggled with him until so weak that the assassin could hold him with one hand, and that then the latter put his hand in his bosom, as if to draw out a weapon. He took out something; the witness did not know what, but thought it a pistol. At this point his recollection ceased. Now, this evidence can readily be explained by the discovery made by the jury. When Mr. Rademacher was waked, it was after the murderer had despatched Mrs. R.; and had broken the knife found in the bed. His hands must have had some blood upon them, which was transferred to the inside lining of his coat, upon his taking out the weapon therefrom, which was probably the knife missing from the establishment of Mr. Hortz, and which the circumstances so strongly show the prisoner to have been in possession of. That no other instrument except that with which Mr. R. was beaten was previously used, appears by his evidence; and the fact of his losing his recollection immediately after the murderer put his hand in his bosom, is perfectly reconcileable with a supposition of a loss of blood from wounds by a sharp instrument. Immediately after the verdict was delivered, the prisoner was taken back to the County Prison; in the charge of the officers. The motion for a new trial has not yet been made, nor have the Court fixed a day for the sentence.

We understand that Langfeld has been confined to the floor of his cell by a heavy chain, which obliges him to confine his movements for exercise within a very small space. The desperate character of the prisoner and the fear of his doing some bodily injury to the officers of the prison, are the reason for the adoption of these precautionary measures.

DESTRUCTIVE FIRE—TIMES OFFICE DESTROYED.—Yesterday morning, between one and two o'clock, the Times and Daily Keystone, No. 32 South Third street, was destroyed by fire. The fire was discovered in the first story, having been ignited near the stairway, in the back room, and spreading with great rapidity, the flames communicated to the upper rooms in a short time, damaging and destroying almost every thing within its range to the roof. The basement was occupied as the press-room, which, with its contents was but slightly damaged. The first story, used as the publication office; the second as the composing room; the third and fourth as the Times' job office, and the garet by Jason Mahan, stereotyper, were severally burnt out, and a large portion of their contents were destroyed. Colonel Florence, the proprietor, as well as George C. Wilson, the owner of the building, are insured.

The books and papers belonging to the office, with the forms of yesterday's edition, were saved. The fire broke out when about half of the edition of the paper was worked off. None of the adjoining property was insured. Messrs. Yardley & Emory, brokers, occupying a part of the lower story, were not seriously harmed, except perhaps from water. Mr. Mahan was not insured, and besides losing a large number of very ancient and valuable mathematical works, he has lost the labor of twelve months upon a work for the Rev. C. H. Williams. The stereotype plates, and the manuscripts of the works, one half of which was original, are destroyed. There was also a work of five hundred pages in the job office of the Times, which shared the same fate. This, as well as the other, was nearly completed.

The fire was the work of an incendiary. In consequence of the erection of new buildings on Chesnut street, the rear of No. 32 was accessible, and no doubt through this way the incendiary entered and fired the premises. We are glad to learn that Col. Florence, the proprietor of the Times, has succeeded in effecting arrangements by which his paper will be issued regularly as heretofore, and that in a short time it will appear with new type, &c.
