Truly the Federalists are in a sad predicament, and are sorely puzzled to ascertain the whereabouts Traly the Federalists are in a sad predicament, and are sorely puzzled to ascertain the whereabouts of Gen. Taylor. It is true, if a committee is sent to him requesting affirmative answers to certain to him requesting affirmative answers to certain of the District, and often against the wishes of the people of the District, and often against their remonstrances, to him requesting affirmative answers to certain questions, he grants their requests, without hesitation, and thus satisfies them, and they leave him highly pleased with their success. But searcely is the first committee out of his sight before a second visits him asking negative answers to the very same questions to which he had just replied in the affirmative, and the two "Cards" are published terhaps in the same paper! Now is this not dispressed in the same prof, strong as hely writ, that Gen. Taylor readily agrees to this request also, and the two "Cards" are published terhaps in the same paper! Now is this not dispressed? Is it not proof, strong as hely writ, that Gen. Taylor is a man of weak mind, capable of being advised to do any act? He has contradicted himself over and over again, and really appears to have no mind of his own on any subject. That he is the nest, well-meaning man, we have do doubt, but that he is very weak in mind all must admit. A beautiful candidate for the Prestdency, indeed. Presidency, indeed.
