From the Pendi Notes of John of York. Sunday and Sunday Scenes in Mexico. Sunday and Sunday Scenes in Moxico.

Every body negatinted with the character of the Spaniads, or their descendants in Moxico, knows that Sunday is the great gala day of the week. In the morning all go to mass—the grand Cathedral, the churches and chapels are thronged with devout worshippers; and, (think what we may of their religion.) I do not believe there are a more strictly religious people in the world than the wayward and turbulent citizens of our sister Republic. Their belief in the doctrines taught by their holy fathers is strong, and with them incontrovertible; if the teachings are erroncous, the orimes committed under their sanction are upon the head of the church. their sanction are upon the head of the church. I cannot say that I was not favorably impressed toward the Catholic religion as it exists in Mexico. The cathedrals and churches do not have pews or seats, as all churches do here—where you must pay for one, or stand a chance of sometimes sitting upon the floor, or standing up during the service; but prince and beggar, millionaire and lepero, kucel side by side upon the floor. Christians know no rank thore. Mass over, all the sins of commission and omission tion are upon the head of the church.

Mass over, all the sins of commission and omission at one of the population go forth for enjoyment; and for this there are many ways and means. Every principal town has its passe, or public drive, and of a Sunday afternoon, or on the afternoon of any extraording forms. The creditors will please present their claims at that creditors will please present their claims at that of a Sunday afternoon, or on the afternoon of any extraordinary feast day, it is thronged with carriages and equestrians. The capitol of Mexico has two-one, the Pasco Nuevo, is only a resort during Lont, the grand pasco being used during the rest of the year. This splendid drive is from eight to an handred feet wide, beautifully Macadamized and lined on both sides with double rows of treas, between which are neat gravelled walks for pedestrains; but if you would be noticed, don't risk yourself there on foot of a gola day. The drive is about half a mile in length, and at either end are fountains, ornamented with statuary, while in the centre is a grand fountain, with a temple surmounted by classic groupings.

Around this fountain is a large circle bordered by circular seats made of stone and mason work, and in front of these the carriages are arranged with the more or less ornamented with lace, enthroidery and silver buttons, and pants made to fit the hips closely and widening towards the ankle. The legs are slashed from the hip down, and buttoned at short intervals with silver or gold buttons—generally bell formed, which are united by links about an inch and a half in length, leaving a slight opening, through which the drawyers are seen. These are principally of the linen, though I have seen some of richer fabrics, beautifully embroidered. So much of the pantaloons as touch the saddle, have generally an outward lining or covering of fine skin, or cloth of different color from the remainder. Either boots or shoes are worn, as suits the fancy or convenience of the rider. The hat is very handsome and in execlent harmony with the whole. The brim varies from three to five inches in width, is perfectly straight, and underneath the edge is ornamented with a strip of gold or silver lace, varying from one to two inches in width. The crown is about six inches high, encircled by gold or silver band of different widths, and on either side, an inch and a half below the grown, are two buttons of cither of the precious metals.—The saddle and bride are too complicated for a pen—the pencil must pourtray them, but they are extravagently ornamented, often with gold, but mostly with silver. They cost from $75 to $500, and sometimes even more than the latter figure. I saw one, made for Gen. Santa Anna, (but which he did'nt happen to get,) that cost $1000.

If you would see this passe at best advantage; ride out at five o'clock of a Sunday afternoon. There will be hundreds of carriages, and all the wealth, ton, and beauty of the capital will be there.

for Gen. Santa Anna, (but which he did'at happen to get.) that cost $1000.

A Moxican (or Spanish) gallant, is in his elements upon the pase of a Sunday afternoon. He is continually moving—except when pausing a moment to flips a few words of compliment to a fair senorita, riding the length of the drive, making the round of the fountains, or playing equestrian feats for the benefit of the lookers on.

The facility and rapidity with which they can turn and even whirl their horses, often half a dozen times round in succession, is astonishing, but the ground when at full speed. I have seen a lady, while her handkerchief on the ground, and bid them bring it to her. There is always a great irwilly among the gallants for the first chance, for the feat is hardly ever missed by an expert horseman. The lucky one rides back six to eight hundred yards, wheels his lorse and putting his spars home, come down at top of the animal's speed. A sther inder mars the object, he catches the mane with his left hand, throws his in his sadide and headed around before he has passed the spot two rods. I have seen a helm pick up a shilling or sizpence with the same case.

The pase is but one of the minny places of amusement and pleulaure for a Sunday afternoon; the Circus, the Theatre, the Plaza de Tores, the Alemda, the Causeways, and (at night) the Masquerade, all offer their cxhibitions and enchantments. But these must wit for other sketches.—Pennsylvanian.

Four months ago he had an situade of sickness; but recovered and to all appearance entirely healthy.

About a fortnight after his recovery he was seized with drowsiness, and for some time after, slept nearly two-thirds of the day. This disease continued to increase, and he would sleep two or three days with but waking. When we saw him, he was continuing in uninterrupted sleep of five days. His pulse is regular, though not very full, his respiration is easy and natural, and his skin moist and cool. Mr. George Spangler.

Sir—We have been using the Thermometer Churn I got of you for some time and find it far superior to the old barrel churn for several reasons. First, great saving of time in getting butter the average time of a churning being about fifteen minutes, (all weathers) we have got butter in the short space of ten minutes. Secondly, the butter when obtained is much firmer than when using any other churn. Finally, my folks say they would not exchange for any other churn and twice the original cost of the Thermometer churn.

Mr. George Spangler:

I have the Crowell Thermometer Churn you made for me in use at my place, and I do not hesitate to say that no farmer should be without it. Fifteen minutes is all the time required to make butter, and the value of this saving of time and labor consists in this—that it requires no more time at any one season than another, and that the temperature of the cream, necessary to make butter, is produced with certainty and without the admixture of warm or cold water with the cream isself.

To the Public.

For the benefit of the better part of man (woman) I give this certificate after using the Thermometer churn made by Mr. George Spangler of this place, I would have none other in my family. We have been using the old barrel churn for thirty years past, and I must say it is not to be compared to Crowell's and I must say it is not to be compared to Crowell's Thermometer Churn, either for speed of churning or convenience. In the old barrel-churn it took generally from four to six hours to churn the churning—now in the Thermometer churn we can churn butter in from fifteen to twenty minutes, by bringing the cream to the proper temperature. I can recommend it to the public as no chest.
