THE DREAM OF PILATE'S WIFE. Matt. xxvii. 19.

BY CHARLES W. BAIRD. "It was not sleep that bound my sight. Upon that well remembred night; It was not facey s fitth power lieguised me in that solemn hour; But o'er the vision of my soul. The mystic fature seemed to roll; And in the deep propiletic trance. Revealed its treasures to my glauce.

Before my wondering eyes there stood A vast, a countless multitude; The heary sire, the pratting child, The mether and the maiden muld, The mether and the maiden muld, The gradeone youth and the man of care—All tribes, all ages, mingled there; And all, where'er I unred to see, In humble sileace bent the knee.

"Sill ger the crowded scene I gazed:
Against the turid enstern sky
I saw the shameful cross spraised;
I saw the sufferer dommed to die.
'Ywas lie, whom late, with sorrowing mien
In Zhon's streets I off hid seen;
And now in blood and agony,
He turned b dying look on me, in Then selly from that gathering throng Arnes the sound of selenn anny in Arnes the sound of selenn anny in An white Longhit through ye. The mydrid voices seemed to any ye. An 'we followed in this that died, hy Pontjus Plinte crustfied— That He shall come, whom time is fied, To judge the living and the dead.

I woke: thou wast not by my side; "I woke; thou west not py mysuc; heard a loud, exiting gry; there is loud, exiting gry; the olders murnitr-Crucify! O Priste, inter thou marked my prayer, that guilties thou the shield and space, That deed of horror would not be." A stain to thine—d carse to thee!
