NO. 20: 60 to

VOL. 36.

CARLISLE, PA., THURSDAY; OCTOBER 25, 1849.

softly on the silent companions, while the rest of the room was in shadow. The light grow fainter—evening deepened; yet still they were there; one by one it sixtee a deepened; yet still they were there; one by one it sixtee a deepened; yet still they were there; one by one it sixtee a deepened; yet still they were there; one by one it is little wants opened the door and called him by name, did the old man rouse himself from his deep it reverie.

It was a busy day in Lombard street, and with the city bankers generally, for dividends on consols had begun to be paid. Clerks, with great leathers had begun to be paid. Clerks, with great leathers had begun to be paid. Clerks, with great leathers had begun to be paid. Clerks, with great leathers in the cases roudy to burst with the riches they contained had begun to be paid. Clerks, with great leathers and notes, hurried into one bank, and hurried in checks and notes, hurried into one bank, and hurried into o

| Company | Comp