The circumstances of the claim were stated to be, that in September, 1829, the palace of William, Prince of Orange, and of the Princess, his wife, situated near Brussels was burglariously entered and rubbed of all the royal plate, diadems, insignia, diamonds, crown jewels, and other rich and splendid, articles of value; in all amounting in value, as was said by the Clarge of the Nethentered and robbed of all the royal plate, diadems, insignia, diamonds, crown jewels, and other rich and splendid, articles of value; in all amounting in value, as was said by the Charge of the Notherlands, then in this country, to probably one million of dellars. The police of all Europe were invoked to discover the robbers, but in vain. The government of the Netherlands sent to all the nations of the world a particular description of the articles lost, with a request that custom-house offices and adprise lost, with a request that custom-house offices and agents to offer a roward of fifty thousand floring. This was done. It appeared that one Constant Polari was the robber, and that after taking the articles he found it impossible to do anything with them, and had buried them. In 1831, he took up with a lewd woman and her child, and with them dug up a large portion of the Britises, stowed them away, and, on foot, left Brussels and entered France. Here they disposed of a portion of them, and with the residue placed in a hollow cane; a hollow unbrellastick, and a fiellow toy for a child, reached. America. and passed thocustom-house without detection. They put up at a respectable French boarding-house in New York, where at that time dwelt one John Rowmage, a Frenchman. Rowmage, a Frenchman, Rowmage, a Frenchman, Rowmage, a Frenchman, Rowmage, a Frenchman, and inveigled

New York, where at that time dwelt one John Rowmage, a Frenchman. Rowmage soon got on to the common of intimacy with the woman, and inveigled ther out of the secret. Chevalier Huggins, the Charge from the Netherlands, and the petitioner, became apprised of these facts, and after the Charge from the Netherlands, and the petitioner, became apprised of these facts, and, after the most extraordinary efforts during a period of three years, the petitioner succeeded in recovering the whole of the loss jewels.

During the time between the loss and the arrival of the rogue in this country, the interest in the loss had become considerably heightened from the rumors, and afterwards the direct charge, that the prince was his own robber. The royal family consequently, were more deeply interested in the recovery, and inducements of the most extravagant character were held forward for the recovery of the stolen goods. So great was this feeling that Chevalier Huggins declared that the intrinsic value of the articles was considered as nothing in comparison to the stain upon the character of the Prince. After the conviction of Polari, and his execution, instead of the reward promised, the petitioner was offered a small token, which he indignantly refused. Since that time he has never received anything from Holland. It was known that the U. S. having assumed a debt due by the city of Washington to Holland, have now yearly to pay interest and Instalment on the same, and it had been surgested to Mr. Seeley to apply to Congress, and ask them, is they held the means of idemnity in their hands, to withhold from Holland an amount of the debt due her sufficient to compensate him for his services. In the papers which petitioner presented with his ficient to compensate him for his services. In the papers which petitioner presented with his memorial, he gave what were believed to be pre-memorial, he gave what were believed to be precedents for the action which he proposed.

Mr. Clay said that he was aware that the general rule was, that when a citizen of the United States contracts with a foreign government, he shall rely upon the good faith of that government shall rely upon the good faith of that government for its fulfillment. It was thought, however, that for its fulfillment. It was thought, however, that for its fulfillment. It was thought, however, that there were exceptions to this general rule, of which this appeared to be one. As the Committe on Finace had charge of the bill making the appropriations out of which the petitioner asks relief, he moved a reference to that committee.

Mr. King contended that there was no propriety in the course suggested by the memorial. This potitioner had contracted with the Prince of Orward for certain services, and it was now proposed.

ange for certain services, and it was now proposed that money should be taken from the pockets of the private citizens of Holland, to withhold moneys which we have contacted in good faith to pay them, and which they expect to receive in good faith—to pay a debt due by the Prince of Drange—the Government of Holland, if you place, to a private individual.

Mr. Clay said the Senstor had stated the general rule without doubt. But this was an exception. The proposition was to pay it out of a debt due in part, at least to the Government of Holland, and the was as proper to attach any other property of any foreign credition.

ELECTION DAY AT SACREMENTO CITY.-The Califor nia correspondent of the Tribune tells the following

To day is election, and the polls have just closed, All good old customs have been transferred to this State, and accordingly we have had rain for twenty four hours. This digging, nevertheless, turned, out 105 votes, all of which were "For the Constitution." As there are two or three candidates for State offices, in the place, the dramming up of voters gave one a fresh remielscence of home. The choesing of candidates from lists, nearly all of whom were entirely anknown, was very amusing. Names, in many instances were made to stand for principles accordingly, a Mr. Fair got many votes. One of the candidates, who had been on the river a few days previous, wearing a high crowned silk hat, with narrow brim. To day is election, and the polls have just closed wearing a high crowned slik hat, with narrow brim, lost about twenty votes on that account. Some went lost about twenty votes on that account. Some went no further than to vote for those they setually knew. One who took the opposite extreme, justified himself in this wise:—"When I left home," said he, "I was, determined to get thind. I went it bilind in coming to California, and I'm not going to stop now. I voted for the Constitution, and I have naver sent the Constitution. I voted for all the candidates, and I don't stitution. I voted for all the candidates, and I don't stitution. I voted for all the candidates, and I don't stitution. I voted for all the candidates, and I don't stitute. I would be supported in the candidates, and I don't stitute. I was a constituted to vote, were in high spirits, on exercising the privilege for the first time in their lives. It made no difference what the tokket was; the fact of their having voted very much in-ference their self impertance, for to-day at least.
