

American

BY JOHN B. BRATTON.

CARLISLE, PA., THURSDAY, SEPTEMBER 19, 1850.

AT $200 PER ANNUM.

NO. 15.

VOL. 37.

Bargains! Bargains!

THE subscriber is now selling off his stock of Summer goods at prices lower than ever heard of in Carlisle. His stock is very large, new, and complete. Laws, Barizes, Tissues, Graines, Ribbons, Bonnet Flowers, and other trimmings at wonderful low prices. Stockings and gloves lower than ever. Linens, De Lains, Checks, Tickings, Diapers, Table covers, &c. considerably below low market. In mens wear, such as Tweeds, Cottons, Drilling, CLOTHS AND CASSIMERES at cost for cash. CARPETINGS of all kinds, from Imperial to common at very reduced prices. BOOTS AND SHOES. My stock of this article is too large and I will run them off at prices truly astonishing. Selling shoes worth $1 at 50c. GROCERIES as low as the lowest. Come all who want to lay out your money to the best advantage. And look through the mammoth stock, and you will get the cheapest and best goods ever purchased. Recollect the old stand, East Main street, Carlisle, Pa. CHARLES OGILBY. August 15, 1850.

NEW GOODS!

THE subscriber respectfully informs the public that he has just made desirable additions to his stock of Goods, embracing choice selections of reasonable Goods—among them will be found Gingham, Alpaca, Lawns, Bareges, Bonnets, Faint, Ribbons, Cottons in great variety, Muslins, Gloves, Hosiery. Boots & Shoes. Groceries of all kinds. Thankful for the increasing patronage of a generous public, he invites special attention to the above, feeling confident that he can offer unusual inducements to purchasers. N. W. WOODS, Agt. Carlisle, July 11, 1850.

NOTICE.

A LARGE STOCK OF DRY GOODS SELLING AT THE BEE HIVE At Cost. FOR the benefit of all my friends in the town and country, the subscriber makes the above announcement, to show that he has concluded to change his business, settle up all book accounts, and sell out his entire stock at cost. All who wish to save a penny can do so by calling at the Bee Hive, in North Hanover street, as I will dispose of my stock between this and the 1st of January 1851. I have a large stock of Staple Goods, all suited for family use. S. A. COYLE. July 25, 1850.—2m

Light! Light!

FINE OIL, GAMPAINE AND FLUID. Acknowledged superior and pure, manufactured and sold at the lowest Wholesale price, by JAY'S & HATCH, at the old established stand of the late BENJAMIN T. DAVIS, CAMDEN, New Jersey, where orders by mail or otherwise are solicited, and prompt attention will be given. The voice of the public for fifteen years, and the award of the Silver Medal, and competitor, by the Franklin Institute over all competitors, is sufficient evidence of the excellence of our Oil. Per Pitch, Turpentine, Rosin, and Spirit of Turpentine, for sale Wholesale and Retail. July 25, 1850.—3c

Paper Hanging.

ONE THOUSAND PIECES. One thousand pieces paper hangings received at the store of the subscriber, this week from one of the largest paper hanging establishments in the world, will be sold at 10, 12, 16, 20, 25, 31, 37, and 50 cents per piece. They are good, beautiful, and uncommonly cheap. C. OGILBY. AUG. 15.

TO FARMERS AND MEN OF BUSINESS.

OILS, CANDLES AND GUANO. THE SUBSCRIBER offers, at the lowest rates, in any quantity to suit purchasers, GENUINE PERUVIAN GUANO, and every variety of SPERM, WHALE, LARD, AND TANNERS' OILS. Manufacturers, Tanners, Farmers, Dealers and Consumers, are invited to call. GEO. W. HEDGWAY. No 37 North Wharves, the first Old Store, below Race street, Philadelphia. August 15, 1850.—3m

More New Goods.

J. L. STERNER & CO., have just received their third supply of Summer Goods, among which will be found by 30 cent, the cheapest stock of Goods ever opened in Carlisle. Laws at 6, 7, 8, 9, 10 and 12 1/2 cents. Summer Lusters at 6, 8, 10, 12 1/2, 18 1/2 & 20 cents. Calicoes at 3, 4, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10 and 12 1/2 cents. Summer Pants stuff at 6, 8, 9, 10, 12 1/2 & 25 cts. Checks at 6 to 12 1/2 cents. Blankets at all prices, and every thing else in our line of business, unusually low. We invite all to call and examine for themselves, as there is no charge made for showing Goods. Carlisle, June 20, 1850

Farmers and Drivers' Inn.

West High Street, one square West of the Rail Road Depot, Carlisle. THE subscriber begs leave to inform his friends and the travelling community that he has leased the above well known stand, recently kept by Jacob H. Bessner, dead, and is now fully prepared to accommodate all those who may be pleased to make it their stopping place. THE HOUSE has been recently furnished. The BRASS attached is large and convenient, and capable of accommodating fifty head of horses. His STABLE will at all times be supplied with the best markets can afford, and his BARN with the choicest flours. Thankful for the patronage thus far bestowed, he respectfully solicits a continuance of the same. C. G. STOUGH. Carlisle, May 23, 1850.—1f

White Lead.

WETHERILL'S White Lead and 5 barrels Linseed Oil, just received by the subscriber in Main street, to be sold at old cheap. HENRY SAXTON. Aug. 15.

THE VOLUNTEER.

CARLISLE, THURSDAY, SEPT. 19, 1850.

TRIBUTE OF RESPECT!

At a meeting of the students of Newville Academy, held on Tuesday, Sept. 10th, 1850, the following resolutions were adopted: Resolved, That we do not all things according to the counsel of his own will, and for his own glory, has been pleased to remove from our midst by death our beloved companion and fellow student, James Adams, Therefore Resolved, That we feel ourselves called upon to mourn the loss of one, who was a kind and tender companion, a devoted friend, and a diligent and industrious fellow student. Resolved, That we acknowledge the hand of God in this afflictive Providence, for "He doeth all things well." Resolved, That we receive this bereavement as a warning, that our time is not our own, but that it belongeth to Him who hath declared, "Watch ye therefore, for ye know not the day nor the hour, wherein the son of man cometh." Resolved, That we deeply sympathize with his afflicted parents and brother, and hope that "He who tempered the wind to the shore limb," will grant them the consolation which will comfort them in their bereavement and enable them to trust in Him. Resolved, That we wear the usual badge of mourning for thirty days. Resolved, That copies of these resolutions be sent to the surviving relatives, and also be published in the Carlisle papers. HUGH B. CRAIG, S. A. McELHINNY, EDI BRANDY, JOHN A. MOORE, FRED. SWOYER, Committee.

Meeting of Congressional Conference.

The Congressional Conference for the District composed of the counties of Franklin, Cumberland and Perry, met at the House of Gen. J. M. Woodburn, in Newville, Cumberland county, Pa., on Monday, September 21st, 1850. The following persons were present: From Cumberland county, David Sterrett, John Clendenin, Wm. H. Anderson, James Kay, James B. Orr, Wilson Reilly. From Perry county, Perry county, Franklin county, Mr. D. Sterrett was appointed President, and Mr. J. Kay, Secretary. On motion of Mr. Clendenin, Mr. John Moore, of Newville, was admitted to a seat in the Conference in room of Dr. Baughman, who was absent. On motion of Mr. Clendenin, the Hon. James X. McLanahan was unanimously nominated as the Democratic candidate for this District, for re-election to Congress. The President appointed Messrs. Anderson, Moore and Reilly, a Committee to draft resolutions. The Committee reported the following resolution which was adopted by a unanimous vote: Resolved, That the lion hearted Democracy of this Congressional District have witnessed with the liveliest emotions of pride and exultation, the noble and patriotic course of the Hon. James X. McLanahan, the eloquent and intrepid representative in Congress. His fearless and powerful vindication of the great and glorious principles of the Democratic party—his noble devotion to the compromise of the Constitution—his thrilling appeals for the patriotic course of the American Union, has associated his name with the best Patriots and Statesmen of our country. The unanimity that has called for his re-nomination, and the enthusiasm that greets it, at the same time, a distinguished commentary upon his talents and patriotism, and the best earnest of his triumphs to re-elect him to Congress. On motion the proceedings of the Conference were read by the officers and ordered to be published in all the Democratic papers of the District. D. STERRETT, President. JAMES KAY, Secretary. The General of Gen. Taylor.

Old Barks.

The Democrats of old Berks have nominated their ticket. J. Glancy Jones, a true and radical Democrat, is the nominee for Congress. Assembly—Alexander S. Feather, Reading. John C. Evans, Conarvon. Samuel Fegeley, Greenwich. Jacob Kniffnyder, Wounded. District Attorney—J. Hagenman, Reading. Commissioner—Joseph A. Schneider, Reading. The following admirable resolutions, among others, were unanimously adopted: Resolved, That we rejoice at the signs in the political horizon, which indicate with utter certainty that our first and only choice for Governor, Col. William Bigler, will be the next candidate of the Democratic yeomanry of Pennsylvania. We regard him as one of the ablest and purest Democrats in the Commonwealth. His great and faithful services in the State Senate, as well as his magnanimous, consistent, and efficient course in the last gubernatorial contest, endear him to the Democracy of Berks county, and we hereby instruct our Delegates to support his nomination to the next Democratic State Convention, throughout. Resolved, That William Karns be our Senatorial Delegate, and David Pitzer, Joel Ritter, C. H. Hunter and William Shuffler, our Representative Delegates in the next Democratic State Convention, to be held at Reading. Resolved, That our Senator and Representatives are hereby instructed not to vote for Simon Cameron for United States Senator in caucus.

Some old bachelor.

Some old bachelor, must have perpetrated the following: "Why are pretty women like barking dogs?" "Because they show their teeth, but do not bite!"

Poetical.

For the Volunteer.

MEMOIRS BUBBINGS.

By J. M.

"Twas at the close of day,
The sun's last ray had faded from the mountain's brow,
And, over hill and vale, "the shades of night" were
Gathering thick and fast. The laborer had left the field,
And with his bosom full of happy thoughts,
Sought eagerly his home.

All nature was hushed in the lap of repose.
Not a sound broke the stillness that hung o'er the scene;
Save the song of the night-bird that wove its strain
From the deep, wooded banks of a murmuring stream.

The stars one by one in their beauty came forth;
And the moon from her home in the far-distant sky
Threw a mild light over the shimmering fall,
While the soft wind of evening wove whispering
I thought of my boyhood, its joys and its fears,
While gazing on that beautiful scene,
Of the many dear friends of those happier years,
And sighing for the time that was only a dream.

I thought of the days that could never return,
Of the friends and the hopes that had faded away,
And with pain the last golden rays of the sun,
As he sank to his rest at the close of the day.

I thought of pleasant wanderings in the forest green;
Of murmuring streams,
Of woodland daisies,
Of bygone dreams,
And boyhood tales;
Of waving blades,
And singing birds,
Of constant friends,
And gentle voices,
Of sunny skies,
And smiles that cheer;
Of sparkling eyes,
And friendship dear.

I thought of every day of joy,
The sweetest found me with a boy;
I thought of the time when I was young,
When the sunshine of pleasure illumined my sky;
I thought of the joys that had faded and gone,
And turned from the path with a tear and sigh.
Carlisle, Sept. 1850.

Miscellaneous.

MAY BE SO.

"Next time you go out, you'll buy me a wagon, won't you mother?" said little boy to me one day. "I didn't want to say 'no,' and destroy his happy feelings; so I was not prepared to say 'yes,' and so I gave the evasive reply so often used under such circumstances. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I entered, a shade of disappointment falling suddenly upon his countenance. 'May be so,' which was meant rather as a negative than an affirmative. The child was satisfied, for he gave my words the meaning he wished them to have. In a little while after, I had forgotten all about it. Not so with my boy. 'I bought a wagon for me,' he said, and he set his heart, confidently, on receiving the wagon the next time I should go out. This happened on the afternoon of that very day. It was towards evening when I called on my mother, and I rang the bell. 'What in the world put that in your head?' 'Where's my wagon?' said he, as I