Missing Books.-We are requested to state that there are a number of valuable books missing from the library of the late Judge Reed, which had been loaned to persons in town. Many of them break sets and render the other volumes comparatively worthless, as for instance, the first volume of the letters of Horace Walpole, the first volume of Hume's England, several volumes of Scott's works, and in the Law Library the first volume of Greenleaf's Evidence. These are only a few of the numbers missing. Persons having books belonging to this library, would therefore confer a great favor by immediately returning them, or handing them over to Wm. H. Miller,
