

THE VOLUNTEER.

John B. Drayton, Editor and Proprietor.

CARLETON, THURSDAY, JUNE 9, 1854.

An Apprentice to the Printing Business.

Will be taken at this office, if application be made immediately. A boy from the country, about 15 or 16 years of age, will be preferred.

Up to the time of going to press, we had heard nothing from the State Convention at Reading.

The weather during the early part of the present week has been unusually cool.

The Cross—From our country friends we hear nothing but glowing accounts of the grain and grasses.

Graham's Magazine—the price of Monthlies—in our table for July? We regard any commendation of this standard journal superfluous, and shall therefore dispense with it.

The Temple—Devoted to Masonry, Literature and Science, Edited by B. Parks and C. E. Blumenthal.

This new candidate for public favor has reached its second number, and comes freighted with literary treasures.

What then would we complain of? Simply this—Mr. Webster's self-glorification and its ulterior object.

The Farm Journal—The June number of this excellent Agricultural Periodical, published at Lancaster city by A. M. Spangler, and edited by Prof. Haldeman, is on our table.

House Talk—During the absence of Mr. John Hemmingway and family, on Sunday week, a German in his employ took from the stable one of his best horses and deliberately rode off.

June Campbell and the Supreme Bench—We have read a lengthy article in reference to this gentleman, signed by Judge Parsons and others of Philadelphia.

The Special Senatorial election in New York, to fill vacancies occasioned by the resignation of the twelve Democratic Senators, has resulted pretty much in favor of the Whigs.

CABINET ORATORY.

In another article we have given our objections against the extent to which Mr. Webster is carrying the practice of addressing political meetings, together with what we deem his unjust assumption of all the credit for the passage of the compromise measures.

"I must now leave the gentlemen who are with me to speak to you—two members of my cabinet. I have left another behind me in Buffalo.

"Two members of my cabinet," are yet to address you gentlemen; and you will reserve some of your enthusiasm for a third when he gets on Buffalo.

In the Methodist Church case, which for several days past has been before the U. S. Circuit Court, in New York, the arguments of counsel were closed on Thursday, and though no decision has as yet been given.

Process of the Short Shift Movement.—The Boston Times says on Saturday afternoon last a lady of 19, daughter of a well-known West End citizen, made her appearance on Cambridge Street, accompanied by her father, dressed in a round hat, short dress, riding boots, and pink satin trousers.

An Accident.—At a parade in Somerset county, on the 23d ult., a young man by the name of Andrew Coleman, was seriously injured by the premature discharge of a cannon he was assisting in discharging.

MR. WEBSTER AND THE PRESIDENCY.

We belong to that class of thinkers who hold that all is an excess of good. Too much of any thing cloy at last, and leaves the possessor in a worse condition than if he had not enjoyed it at all.

In a hearty approval of Mr. Webster's support of the Compromise measures, we yield to no one. Discarding all factious and fanatical associations, he sooner saw his way clear than he threw the weight of his talents, influence and position into the scale of the union party.

Mr. Webster's self-glorification and its ulterior object. He has within one year made more speeches and public addresses, than all his predecessors together have made within fifty years.

Now we protest against this endless self-glorification. We dislike it in the first place because we think it is hardly the thing for a cabinet officer to be absent quite so much from his post on the business of the government.

Mr. Webster's self-glorification and its ulterior object. He has within one year made more speeches and public addresses, than all his predecessors together have made within fifty years.

Now we protest against this endless self-glorification. We dislike it in the first place because we think it is hardly the thing for a cabinet officer to be absent quite so much from his post on the business of the government.

Mr. Webster's self-glorification and its ulterior object. He has within one year made more speeches and public addresses, than all his predecessors together have made within fifty years.

Now we protest against this endless self-glorification. We dislike it in the first place because we think it is hardly the thing for a cabinet officer to be absent quite so much from his post on the business of the government.

Mr. Webster's self-glorification and its ulterior object. He has within one year made more speeches and public addresses, than all his predecessors together have made within fifty years.

Now we protest against this endless self-glorification. We dislike it in the first place because we think it is hardly the thing for a cabinet officer to be absent quite so much from his post on the business of the government.

Mr. Webster's self-glorification and its ulterior object. He has within one year made more speeches and public addresses, than all his predecessors together have made within fifty years.

Now we protest against this endless self-glorification. We dislike it in the first place because we think it is hardly the thing for a cabinet officer to be absent quite so much from his post on the business of the government.

It more firmly by the middle of next October than it does now. Every vestige of the pledges given by Taylor and Johnston has long since disappeared.

After "dilating in a eloquent and fertile style," on the resources of Pennsylvania, and his glories of the protective policy (which last has been mentioned by the governor, as though no recommendation of it had been made.)

When they rise out of the ground, they present a disgusting form, as unlike the future beautiful insect as possible, though fully adapted to their former life.

After our cicadas have sung for us about forty days, it deposits its eggs in the woody part of a soft twig. In a week or two the twig dies, and falling to the ground, leaves the eggs to enter the earth.

It is amusing to hear people talk of their destructiveness. They are perfectly harmless to vegetation. In this respect they bear no relation to the genuine locust, (our insect in the cicada), the scourge of Asia and South Eastern Europe.

After our cicadas have sung for us about forty days, it deposits its eggs in the woody part of a soft twig. In a week or two the twig dies, and falling to the ground, leaves the eggs to enter the earth.

It is amusing to hear people talk of their destructiveness. They are perfectly harmless to vegetation. In this respect they bear no relation to the genuine locust, (our insect in the cicada), the scourge of Asia and South Eastern Europe.

After our cicadas have sung for us about forty days, it deposits its eggs in the woody part of a soft twig. In a week or two the twig dies, and falling to the ground, leaves the eggs to enter the earth.

It is amusing to hear people talk of their destructiveness. They are perfectly harmless to vegetation. In this respect they bear no relation to the genuine locust, (our insect in the cicada), the scourge of Asia and South Eastern Europe.

After our cicadas have sung for us about forty days, it deposits its eggs in the woody part of a soft twig. In a week or two the twig dies, and falling to the ground, leaves the eggs to enter the earth.

It is amusing to hear people talk of their destructiveness. They are perfectly harmless to vegetation. In this respect they bear no relation to the genuine locust, (our insect in the cicada), the scourge of Asia and South Eastern Europe.

After our cicadas have sung for us about forty days, it deposits its eggs in the woody part of a soft twig. In a week or two the twig dies, and falling to the ground, leaves the eggs to enter the earth.

It is amusing to hear people talk of their destructiveness. They are perfectly harmless to vegetation. In this respect they bear no relation to the genuine locust, (our insect in the cicada), the scourge of Asia and South Eastern Europe.

After our cicadas have sung for us about forty days, it deposits its eggs in the woody part of a soft twig. In a week or two the twig dies, and falling to the ground, leaves the eggs to enter the earth.

It is amusing to hear people talk of their destructiveness. They are perfectly harmless to vegetation. In this respect they bear no relation to the genuine locust, (our insect in the cicada), the scourge of Asia and South Eastern Europe.

THE LOCUSTS.

We had intended nothing the arrival of these visitors—but the subjoined communication from a friend meets the case so fully, that we prefer its insertion to anything we could produce upon the subject.

Mr. Eaton—The seventeen year locusts have appeared again, and are making the woods and gardens vocal with their music. I venture to offer a remark or two concerning them, which you may publish or reject at your discretion.

There is something remarkable in their periodicality. I well remember the last time they were with us, in 1834; beyond that my recollection does not extend, though the observation of ages goes to confirm the fact.

When they rise out of the ground, they present a disgusting form, as unlike the future beautiful insect as possible, though fully adapted to their former life.

After our cicadas have sung for us about forty days, it deposits its eggs in the woody part of a soft twig. In a week or two the twig dies, and falling to the ground, leaves the eggs to enter the earth.

It is amusing to hear people talk of their destructiveness. They are perfectly harmless to vegetation. In this respect they bear no relation to the genuine locust, (our insect in the cicada), the scourge of Asia and South Eastern Europe.

After our cicadas have sung for us about forty days, it deposits its eggs in the woody part of a soft twig. In a week or two the twig dies, and falling to the ground, leaves the eggs to enter the earth.

It is amusing to hear people talk of their destructiveness. They are perfectly harmless to vegetation. In this respect they bear no relation to the genuine locust, (our insect in the cicada), the scourge of Asia and South Eastern Europe.

After our cicadas have sung for us about forty days, it deposits its eggs in the woody part of a soft twig. In a week or two the twig dies, and falling to the ground, leaves the eggs to enter the earth.

It is amusing to hear people talk of their destructiveness. They are perfectly harmless to vegetation. In this respect they bear no relation to the genuine locust, (our insect in the cicada), the scourge of Asia and South Eastern Europe.

After our cicadas have sung for us about forty days, it deposits its eggs in the woody part of a soft twig. In a week or two the twig dies, and falling to the ground, leaves the eggs to enter the earth.

It is amusing to hear people talk of their destructiveness. They are perfectly harmless to vegetation. In this respect they bear no relation to the genuine locust, (our insect in the cicada), the scourge of Asia and South Eastern Europe.

After our cicadas have sung for us about forty days, it deposits its eggs in the woody part of a soft twig. In a week or two the twig dies, and falling to the ground, leaves the eggs to enter the earth.

It is amusing to hear people talk of their destructiveness. They are perfectly harmless to vegetation. In this respect they bear no relation to the genuine locust, (our insect in the cicada), the scourge of Asia and South Eastern Europe.

After our cicadas have sung for us about forty days, it deposits its eggs in the woody part of a soft twig. In a week or two the twig dies, and falling to the ground, leaves the eggs to enter the earth.

It is amusing to hear people talk of their destructiveness. They are perfectly harmless to vegetation. In this respect they bear no relation to the genuine locust, (our insect in the cicada), the scourge of Asia and South Eastern Europe.

CLIPPINGS OF THE WEEK.

HALF STORM.—The Pittsburg Post says—We learn from a gentleman residing about eight miles from our city, on the Butler turnpike, that on Tuesday week he had a tremendous hail storm, some of the hail stones being three inches in diameter.

DEATH OF ROBERT E. HORNOR.—It is with feelings of regret and sorrow, says the Philadelphia Daily News, that we announce the death of Robert E. Hornor, Esq., door keeper of the United States House of Representatives. He died at his residence in Queenston, near Princeton, on Thursday last.

"The Union and a little more of it" was a toast drunk in honor of the steamer Cleopatra, on the occasion of her surrendering to her owner, who had been seized on the belief that she was engaged for the Cuban expedition.

MEXICAN CLAIMS.—The Washington Intelligence says, very large claims have been presented, or will be presented soon, to our Government for damages done by the wild Indians in our newly acquired territory to Mexican property.

DEATH OF GEN. STINE.—An extensive circle of friends and acquaintances, reaching perhaps every county in the State, will learn with deep regret that Gen. Daniel Stine, late State Senator from Lebanon and Lancaster District, is no more.

THE WESTERN AND HARBOR CONVENTION.—The citizens of the West are again moving in favor of Congress appropriating money to improve the rivers and harbors of the country.

THE MORMONS AT SALT LAKE.—The citizens of the West are again moving in favor of Congress appropriating money to improve the rivers and harbors of the country.

THE MORMONS AT SALT LAKE.—The citizens of the West are again moving in favor of Congress appropriating money to improve the rivers and harbors of the country.

THE MORMONS AT SALT LAKE.—The citizens of the West are again moving in favor of Congress appropriating money to improve the rivers and harbors of the country.

THE MORMONS AT SALT LAKE.—The citizens of the West are again moving in favor of Congress appropriating money to improve the rivers and harbors of the country.

THE MORMONS AT SALT LAKE.—The citizens of the West are again moving in favor of Congress appropriating money to improve the rivers and harbors of the country.

THE MORMONS AT SALT LAKE.—The citizens of the West are again moving in favor of Congress appropriating money to improve the rivers and harbors of the country.

THE MORMONS AT SALT LAKE.—The citizens of the West are again moving in favor of Congress appropriating money to improve the rivers and harbors of the country.

THE MORMONS AT SALT LAKE.—The citizens of the West are again moving in favor of Congress appropriating money to improve the rivers and harbors of the country.

THE MORMONS AT SALT LAKE.—The citizens of the West are again moving in favor of Congress appropriating money to improve the rivers and harbors of the country.

THE MORMONS AT SALT LAKE.—The citizens of the West are again moving in favor of Congress appropriating money to improve the rivers and harbors of the country.

THE VOICE OF A PATRIOT.

Dr. Robert Collins, of Georgia, the owner of the slave, Sims, in the robbery of whom he was convicted of a Democrat. Long connected with the Democratic party of the South, and well known as an eloquent and distinguished member of that organization, he is one of those to whom others may look for counsel in the hour of doubt and danger.

"Why any former Union man has so completely changed his course and opinions, is hard to understand; but may have had his object, and others honestly deceived. Fortunately, however, the Democrats as a party did not fall into the error of firming on their old and favorite platform, which was the people—the execution of the laws.

"I am in every sense a Southern man—I have seen to here—my greatest interest is in the preservation of Southern property, and all my efforts are devoted to that end; and in my opinion, the best way to do so, is to swear allegiance to the Constitution, and the Union of the States, and support for office men whose fidelity to the Constitution is beyond question."

"I am in every sense a Southern man—I have seen to here—my greatest interest is in the preservation of Southern property, and all my efforts are devoted to that end; and in my opinion, the best way to do so, is to swear allegiance to the Constitution, and the Union of the States, and support for office men whose fidelity to the Constitution is beyond question."

"I am in every sense a Southern man—I have seen to here—my greatest interest is in the preservation of Southern property, and all my efforts are devoted to that end; and in my opinion, the best way to do so, is to swear allegiance to the Constitution, and the Union of the States, and support for office men whose fidelity to the Constitution is beyond question."

"I am in every sense a Southern man—I have seen to here—my greatest interest is in the preservation of Southern property, and all my efforts are devoted to that end; and in my opinion, the best way to do so, is to swear allegiance to the Constitution, and the Union of the States, and support for office men whose fidelity to the Constitution is beyond question."

"I am in every sense a Southern man—I have seen to here—my greatest interest is in the preservation of Southern property, and all my efforts are devoted to that end; and in my opinion, the best way to do so, is to swear allegiance to the Constitution, and the Union of the States, and support for office men whose fidelity to the Constitution is beyond question."

"I am in every sense a Southern man—I have seen to here—my greatest interest is in the preservation of Southern property, and all my efforts are devoted to that end; and in my opinion, the best way to do so, is to swear allegiance to the Constitution, and the Union of the States, and support for office men whose fidelity to the Constitution is beyond question."

"I am in every sense a Southern man—I have seen to here—my greatest interest is in the preservation of Southern property, and all my efforts are devoted to that end; and in my opinion, the best way to do so, is to swear allegiance to the Constitution, and the Union of the States, and support for office men whose fidelity to the Constitution is beyond question."

"I am in every sense a Southern man—I have seen to here—my greatest interest is in the preservation of Southern property, and all my efforts are devoted to that end; and in my opinion, the best way to do so, is to swear allegiance to the Constitution, and the Union of the States, and support for office men whose fidelity to the Constitution is beyond question."

"I am in every sense a Southern man—I have seen to here—my greatest interest is in the preservation of Southern property, and all my efforts are devoted to that end; and in my opinion, the best way to do so, is to swear allegiance to the Constitution, and the Union of the States, and support for office men whose fidelity to the Constitution is beyond question."

"I am in every sense a Southern man—I have seen to here—my greatest interest is in the preservation of Southern property, and all my efforts are devoted to that end; and in my opinion, the best way to do so, is to swear allegiance to the Constitution, and the Union of the States, and support for office men whose fidelity to the Constitution is beyond question."

"I am in every sense a Southern man—I have seen to here—my greatest interest is in the preservation of Southern property, and all my efforts are devoted to that end; and in my opinion, the best way to do so, is to swear allegiance to the Constitution, and the Union of the States, and support for office men whose fidelity to the Constitution is beyond question."

"I am in every sense a Southern man—I have seen to here—my greatest interest is in the preservation of Southern property, and all my efforts are devoted to that end; and in my opinion, the best way to do so, is to swear allegiance to the Constitution, and the Union of the States, and support for office men whose fidelity to the Constitution is beyond question."

"I am in every sense a Southern man—I have seen to here—my greatest interest is in the preservation of Southern property, and all my efforts are devoted to that end; and in my opinion, the best way to do so, is to swear allegiance to the Constitution, and the Union of the States, and support for office men whose fidelity to the Constitution is beyond question."

"I am in every sense a Southern man—I have seen to here—my greatest interest is in the preservation of Southern property, and all my efforts are devoted to that end; and in my opinion, the best way to do so, is to swear allegiance to the Constitution, and the Union of the States, and support for office men whose fidelity to the Constitution is beyond question."