

OSCAR AND EVA.

No other position or turn of mind so totally unlike a man for all the social offices of life, as indifference to the world in the situation of the young man made for no end, and lives to no purpose. He cannot engage himself in any employment or profession, because he will never have diligence enough to follow, he can succeed in no undertaking, for he will never pursue it to the end, and he will never, after, and relation, for he will not take the least pains to preserve his wife, children or friends.

The philosophy of the present age is peculiarly the philosophy of indifference. Few dive deeper into the human heart than the bosom of the shirt. Who could doubt that he has beneath a cambric front or who imagines that hand accustomed to dirty work which is enveloped in white kid?

A young man having asked Dr. Beecher how he had managed to retain his youthful appearance so well as he had done, the doctor said, "I never ride, I never walk, I never eat more than one dish at a time, I never get drunk, my walking boots are never in circulation; my simple diet prevents indigestion; and never touching ardent spirits, my liver never fears being eaten up alive."

The Oriental have a great reverence for burial grounds, which they periodically call the "Cities of the Dead." They people them with the spirits of the departed, and they seek at the end of his own grave, in order to be buried there.

Peace is the evening star of the soul, as virtue is its sun, and the two are never far apart.

A lawyer, who was sometimes forgetful, having been engaged to plead the cause of an offender, he said by saying, "I know the prisoner at the bar, and he bears the character of being a most consummate and impudent scoundrel." He then proceeded to whisper to him that the prisoner was his client, when he immediately continued: "But what great good man ever lived, who was not outwitted by the scoundrel of his contemporaries?"

Being on a visit to Loud Townsends, at Richmond, happened one morning to look into the pig sty, and saw a silver spoon among the pig's victuals, and the house maid coming by, and perceiving Mr. Pooles, cried out, "Pigs on the pig, what a noise they make!" "Why they may be said, Pooles, "for they have but one silver spoon between them."

Fascinated or Jealous.—A beautiful young lady, having called on an ugly gentleman to dance with her, he was astonished at the condescension, and believing that she was in love with him, in a very pressing manner, desired to know why she had selected him from the rest of the company. "Because, sir," replied the lady, "my husband commanded me to select such a partner as should not give him cause for jealousy."

A Female Hit.—A lawyer once pleaded with great ability the cause of his client for nearly an hour. When he had done, his antagonist, with a supercilious sneer said he did not understand a word of what he said, who nearly replied, "I believe so, for I was speaking Latin."

It is an extremely difficult in the mixed things of this world to get truly and kindly too; but therein lies one of the great trials of man—that his sincerity should have kindness in it, and his kindness truth.

To be a woman of fashion is one of the easiest things in the world. All she has to do is to describe it—buy anything you don't want, and pay for nothing you do; smile on all mankind but your husband; be happy everywhere but at home; hate the country; show favor to your children, and nurse ladies; and in short, do everything you can to show the Lord, and do nothing that whenever the physician makes out your warrant.

An eloquent preacher passed in the middle of his sermon, and remarked: "If I were at home (meaning his own church), I would say something about going to sleep, but as I am not I forbear." In an instant, he had fallen dead, and was lying on the adjacent pew bench, straightened up.

A Yankee who lately removed to Wisconsin, written to his brother in Massachusetts, that the section where he resides is in a highly prosperous condition. He says that but one failure has ever occurred in his county, and in that case the man paid one hundred and twenty-five cents on a dollar.

During the war, an Irish peasant, who was posted with a musket on duty, and had wandered a little out of his position, was accosted by an officer with "What are you here for?" "Faith, your honor," said the man, "with his accustomed grin of good humor, 'they come here to see a man of a dollar!'"

There have been various definitions of "a gentleman," but the present one is, that it is a man who is recently by a fair girl. A gentleman is a human being, combining a woman's tenderness with a man's courage. "The intellect of the answer proves its author a lady."

It is currently reported in certain circles, that the man who wears the shoes made by a sherry bottler for the best of the Missouri lot, is in the habit of going to a party of stockings, to be knit from some of the yarn spun by Jack Brunsby.

It is said that a portion of the population of Maine has become so strictly temperate, that they are entirely destitute of jugular veins; hence it is supposed that temperance is a great preventive of suicide.

"Pomp, what are a jury of ink?" "Well, de do be ink?" "Ink is a man who sits on a dead man to find out whether he was dead for certain or only played possum."

When we last saw the Ohio river, it was in its bed, but we learn that it is now on a stand. The stand is supposed to have the usual complement of legs, as the river continues to run.

The opinion of Dr. Digg is solicited respecting the following recipe for curing a cold: "A speedy answer is desirable."

Nothing like air! A little steamboat passed Cincinnati, last week, that had no pilot house, and its captain put an umbrella over the wheel to keep his eyes from being blinded.

What are the most unseemly things in the world? Mistakes. You never see two of them together.

The Devil's Sister.—A woman, quarrelling with her husband, told him she believed if she was to die, he would marry the devil's daughter. "The law does not allow a man to marry two sisters," replied the tender husband.

Answer your son well, or others will instruct him. He will grow a little wiser, and will go to school of wisdom, or he will go to school of the first academy, kept by the lady with the cap and veil. There is always teaching going on of some sort, just as in fields—vegetation is never idle.

This is a dangerous period of the year for colds—people should be careful. Mrs. Farrington says she has got a romantic affection in her shoulder, and the neurology in her head, and the embargo in the region of her jocular vein; all of the opening of the window to throw a bottle at a couple of belligerent cats.

The son of Quintus Fabius Maximus advised his father, in case of a post, saying, "It will only cost a few men." Fabius answered dryly, "I will give you one of the few."

CALIFORNIA SUICIDES are pretty well paid. The man who is allowed three dollars for serving a subpoena, or any other process by an action for libel, is paid fifty cents per mile; for a bond, two dollars for a cent, or four cents for the bond, one dollar for serving a subpoena, for each witness, one dollar, and for every mile travelled serving his own.

What are the PARAGON COSTS.—The expense per annum to each person of the population in supporting the President of the United States, by paying his salary is one million of a cent, or four cents for the term of four years. This must be the reason why some don't care a cent who is President.

A poor fellow, in his examination, the other day, was asked if he had not been in the court before, and what for? (He had been up for boy stealing.) "It was nothing at all," said the humorist, "I only received a father's scolding from the grave."

The Greek Race and Language.

The long continuance of the Greek race and language is one of the most striking phenomena in the history of the world. For nearly three thousand years the Greek language and the Greek race have preserved all their characteristic features; and there is scarcely so much difference between the language of the cotemporaries of Homer and that of the inhabitants of Athens at the present day, as between the English of Chaucer, and the English of our modern writers. The Greek people already possessed a national literature, and had covered many of the shores of the Mediterranean with their colonies. The nationality of Rome was broken up for a thousand years for the imperial city had fallen a prey to its barbarian invaders, and its western provinces had been broken up into the kingdoms of the modern European commonwealth, there still continued to exist a mighty city on the shores of the Bosphorus, whose monarchs ruled over a large portion of eastern Europe and western Asia, and whose inhabitants spoke the language, and could read the works of Homer, Thucydides, and Plato. The extraordinary vitality of the people enabled them to resist and overcome those internal and external causes of decay which have destroyed the nationality and the language of so many other races. Whatever they borrowed from other nations, they assimilated to themselves. Hence the controversy of the learned respecting the origin of their religion, civilization, and art—whether it was indigenous or derived from the East, is of comparative little importance, since whatever may have been their origin, they differ in every essential feature from their eastern type, and bear the impress of the Hellenic mind. Like the nations of western Europe, they yielded to the conquering legions of Rome; but unlike the former, they did not adopt the language or customs of their conquerors. On the contrary, they not only maintained their own national character and language in Greece itself, but the Greek cities, which had been founded in the east by Alexander and his successors, though inhabited by a mixed population, alike retained all Romanizing influences, and adhered to a greater or less extent their Hellenic character.

NAPOLEON.

Such a man was wanted, and such a man was born; a man of stone and iron, capable of sitting on a horseback sixteen or seventeen hours, of going many days together without rest or food, except by snatches, and with the speed and spring of a gazelle in action; a man not embarrassed by any scruples; compact, instant, selfish, prudent, and of a perception which cannot suffer itself to be baulked or misled by any pretences of others, or any opposition, or any heat or haste of his own. "My hand only," he said, "was not at the extremity of my arm, it was immediately connected with the head." He respected the power of nature and fortune, and ascribed to it his superiority, instead of valuing himself, like inferior men, on his opinionatedness and waving war with nature. His favorite rhetoric lay in allusion to his star and he pleased himself, as well as the people, when he styled himself the "Child of Destiny." They charge me, said he, with the commission of great crimes: men of my stamp do not commit crimes. Nothing has been more simple than my elevation: 'tis in vain to ascribe it to intrigue or crime: it was owing to the necessity of the times, and to my reputation for having fought well against the enemies of my country. I have always marched with the opinion of great masses, and with events. Of what use then, would crimes be to me? Again, he said, speaking of his son "My son cannot replace me; could not replace myself. I am the creature of circumstances."

A Dream Realized.

Some time during the past summer, a stranger stopped at one of the watering places on the mountain south of this place. After his arrival there he became sick, and for several days was apparently in danger. On his recovery he informed the proprietor of the house that during his illness he had dreamed for three nights in succession that he had discovered, at a certain distance in the mountain, under a rock, an earthen crock, containing a large amount of silver. At this the worthy host expressed his surprise, and spoke of it as a mysterious dream. Afterwards, however, they were walking together in that direction, when the dream was again adverted to by the stranger, and the proprietor at once proposed an examination, to satisfy curiosity. The rock was soon found, and after carefully brushing the leaves away, it was moved, and to their utter amazement, there was found a crock full of silver. They took it out and conveyed it secretly to the house, and on examination it was found to contain $400, (all in half dollars) which was divided equally between them. The day after the discovery, the stranger was about to take his leave of the proprietor, and he had his friend, the proprietor of the house, and complained to him of the inconvenience of carrying the silver, when an exchange was proposed and made, the stranger receiving bankable paper for his silver. It was not long after his departure, however, till the proprietor made another discovery—his four hundred dollars in silver were counted, and he had but three ingenuously swindled out of two hundred dollars.

A TOUCHING INCIDENT.

Some two years ago, says the Waterville Mail, Mr. E. S. Moody of Monmouth, went to California, leaving his wife and young child with her mother in Boston. The correspondence between the husband and wife was regular, and the young child was expressed by the father that the young child would join him in the far off land of gold; but the definite plan and arrangements for this object had been deferred. A short time since a letter from the distant husband, in which he expressed his cheerfulness and long and weary absence, and the wish to be expressed by the father that the young child would join him in the far off land of gold; but the definite plan and arrangements for this object had been deferred.
