A FABLE.

dold Hodge, one night, at Wilkins' bar, a Had got, in clessic purlance, "tight," (When, as he homeward made his tracks, tight," heard the "Voices of the Night."

As, with a quick, uncertain step,
Upon a mill-pond's brink he came,
Where the old King Bull-Frog held his court,
'He thought he heard one call his name—
"Old Hodge! Old Hodge!" he stopped and gazed
Till goblins seemed to fill the dark,
And Hodge, though brave, was rather scared:
"Whel's that?" he said, "what's that? oh, hark!"
Old Hodge got drunk!

Old Hodge got drunk!

Drunk, drank, drunk!"

"You lie, by gosh!" said Hodge, "you lie!"
And a deep voice answered "Nevermore!"
And Hodge thought Nick himself was near,
Among the bushes on the shore;
'So, thinking it was best to run,
He started like a railroad car;
But hortid shapes now thronged his path,
And voices shouted near and far—
"Old Hodge got drunk!
Old Hodge got drunk!
Drunk, drunk, drunk, drunk!"

Hodge reached his house half dead with fright, And never since has he got "tight."

O

GOOD MANNERS.

GOOD MANNEUS.

There are few things which are scener observed in children and persons than their manners. A passonger takes his seat in a railroad car or in the sulcon of a stemboat, and finds several children about him. Some of them are noisy and rude. The persons who are thus necommoded may not complain. They may very kindly say, "Oh, they are children—let them enjoy themselves;" but just look a moment at their conduct.

The rude children are forming a sort of prison with chairs, and are getting all the empty chairs to-ment at their conduct.

The rade children are forming a sort of prison with chairs, and are getting all the empty chairs together for the purpose. At length they come to one which a feeble lady is using. She is resting her feet on the round of it. They see how it is used, and instead of saying, "excuse us, ma'am, we did not see that you had your feet on it," they say loudly and with whimper, "Oh, now your feet are on it—and we want it." Can any body fail to see that these are very rude and inconsiderate children?

A little girl sees a stranger entering her mother's parlor. She has seen the lady before at a neighbor's house. Instead of rouning and hiding herself in a corner, or putting her finger in her-mouth, or covering it to suppress a rude laugh, she vety properly and modesily introduces the lady to her mother.—The lady is most favorably impressed by this evidence of good manners, and the little girl is remembered by her, with interest; for many years.

We hope that all our young friends will understand, that good manners will obtain a thousand friends, where letters of recommendation and cefficates of good conduct will make but little, if any,

Conversation.—A gentleman once called on Wilkes, and not finding him at home, sat down to await his return, and to amnee himself in the interim, took up a French-book of aneeddets, many of which he observed were marked. Mr. Wilkes did not come back and the gentleman went away. He met him, however, with sume mutual friends at dinner, and, to his opserved marked in the observed marked in the book, most ingenleusly introduced in the overlug.

"Lawrers are the only men who have no faith in experience, and who believe that the older the world, the less it knows about right or wrong.
