

THE VOLUNTEER.

John B. Weston, Editor and Proprietor.

CARLEISLE, NOVEMBER 11, 1852.

The Election being Over.

We can now give to our readers a greater variety of Literary, Scientific, and Agricultural news...

WOOD WANTED.

Those of our subscribers who have been in the habit of sending...

ENTERED UPON HIS DUTIES.

JOHN BRAD, Esq., who was elected a County Commissioner for this county...

COURT.

Court commenced in this borough on Monday, before President Judge, Graham, and Associates...

THE NEW COUNTY PRISON.

Our County Commissioners have at length adopted a plan for the new County Prison, and will shortly issue proposals for building...

EULOGY ON MR. WESTON.

The faculty and students of Dickinson College, as well as a number of our citizens...

SPEAKER OF THE HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

A correspondent of the Lancaster Intelligencer names WILLIAM P. SCHELL, the able and reliable member from Fulton county...

EARLY IN THE FIELD.

The Reading Journal, the Whig organ in old Berks, nominates the Hon. EDWARD STANLEY, of North Carolina...

NARROW ESCAPE.

Governor Bigler and the Hon. Thomas Corwin were in a train of cars which left Harrisburg on Thursday afternoon week...

THE PROPHECY OF THE HERALD.

The week before the election our neighbor the Herald made a number of predictions in regard to the result of the Presidential contest...

WHO IS FRANK PIERCE?

This question, we believe—in fact we can say to a certainty that we know it—has been satisfactorily answered by the American people...

THE HOW OF PROMISES.

On the day of the Presidential election (Tuesday week last) at about half past 2 o'clock...

SCOTT SONGS.

During the late political campaign, the poets of the Whig party were kept busy in writing songs in praise of Scott and Graham...

CUMBERLAND COUNTY SLAVE CASE.

Verdict for the Plaintiff. We learn from the Philadelphia Sun of Tuesday last, that the jury in the case of Oliver et al. vs. Weakly et al...

SLAVE TRADE EXTINCT IN BRAZIL.

The African slave trade, which for so many years was extensively carried on by Brazil...

MR. WESTON, THREE DAYS BEFORE HE DIED.

Mr. Webster, three days before he died, in all his visit his extensive studies, had his noble chest driven up to his mansion...

MR. WESTON, THREE DAYS BEFORE HE DIED.

Mr. Weston, three days before he died, in all his visit his extensive studies, had his noble chest driven up to his mansion...

MR. WESTON, THREE DAYS BEFORE HE DIED.

Mr. Weston, three days before he died, in all his visit his extensive studies, had his noble chest driven up to his mansion...

MR. WESTON, THREE DAYS BEFORE HE DIED.

Mr. Weston, three days before he died, in all his visit his extensive studies, had his noble chest driven up to his mansion...

OUR GREAT AND GLORIOUS VICTORY.

The result of the recent Presidential election is now ascertained to a certainty. With the exception of two States, the whole Union has declared in favor of those pure patriots and tried statesmen, PIERCE and KING...

THE RESULT IN MAJORITY.

On the day of the Presidential election (Tuesday week last) at about half past 2 o'clock, the unusual spectacle was presented of a brilliant rainbow up in the extreme northern part of the heavens...

THE HOW OF PROMISES.

On the day of the Presidential election (Tuesday week last) at about half past 2 o'clock, the unusual spectacle was presented of a brilliant rainbow up in the extreme northern part of the heavens...

SCOTT SONGS.

During the late political campaign, the poets of the Whig party were kept busy in writing songs in praise of Scott and Graham...

CUMBERLAND COUNTY SLAVE CASE.

Verdict for the Plaintiff. We learn from the Philadelphia Sun of Tuesday last, that the jury in the case of Oliver et al. vs. Weakly et al...

SLAVE TRADE EXTINCT IN BRAZIL.

The African slave trade, which for so many years was extensively carried on by Brazil...

MR. WESTON, THREE DAYS BEFORE HE DIED.

Mr. Weston, three days before he died, in all his visit his extensive studies, had his noble chest driven up to his mansion...

MR. WESTON, THREE DAYS BEFORE HE DIED.

Mr. Weston, three days before he died, in all his visit his extensive studies, had his noble chest driven up to his mansion...

MR. WESTON, THREE DAYS BEFORE HE DIED.

Mr. Weston, three days before he died, in all his visit his extensive studies, had his noble chest driven up to his mansion...

MR. WESTON, THREE DAYS BEFORE HE DIED.

Mr. Weston, three days before he died, in all his visit his extensive studies, had his noble chest driven up to his mansion...

MR. WESTON, THREE DAYS BEFORE HE DIED.

Mr. Weston, three days before he died, in all his visit his extensive studies, had his noble chest driven up to his mansion...

MR. WESTON, THREE DAYS BEFORE HE DIED.

Mr. Weston, three days before he died, in all his visit his extensive studies, had his noble chest driven up to his mansion...

MR. WESTON, THREE DAYS BEFORE HE DIED.

Mr. Weston, three days before he died, in all his visit his extensive studies, had his noble chest driven up to his mansion...

MR. WESTON, THREE DAYS BEFORE HE DIED.

Mr. Weston, three days before he died, in all his visit his extensive studies, had his noble chest driven up to his mansion...

MR. WESTON, THREE DAYS BEFORE HE DIED.

Mr. Weston, three days before he died, in all his visit his extensive studies, had his noble chest driven up to his mansion...

MR. WESTON, THREE DAYS BEFORE HE DIED.

Mr. Weston, three days before he died, in all his visit his extensive studies, had his noble chest driven up to his mansion...

MR. WESTON, THREE DAYS BEFORE HE DIED.

Mr. Weston, three days before he died, in all his visit his extensive studies, had his noble chest driven up to his mansion...

MR. WESTON, THREE DAYS BEFORE HE DIED.

Mr. Weston, three days before he died, in all his visit his extensive studies, had his noble chest driven up to his mansion...

MR. WESTON, THREE DAYS BEFORE HE DIED.

Mr. Weston, three days before he died, in all his visit his extensive studies, had his noble chest driven up to his mansion...

MR. WESTON, THREE DAYS BEFORE HE DIED.

Mr. Weston, three days before he died, in all his visit his extensive studies, had his noble chest driven up to his mansion...

MR. WESTON, THREE DAYS BEFORE HE DIED.

Mr. Weston, three days before he died, in all his visit his extensive studies, had his noble chest driven up to his mansion...

Cumberland County Official.

Below we give the official result of the Presidential election in this county. It will be seen that the majority for Pierce and King is 310.

PIERCE. SCOTT.

Table with 2 columns: Candidate Name and Votes. Includes entries for Carleisle, East Ward, West Ward, North Middleton, South Middleton, Westpenborough, Lower Dickinson, Frankford, Carleisle District, Frankford, Monroe, Newton, Newville Borough, Westpenborough, Norville District, Upper Allen, Lower Allen, Upper Dickinson, Bridgport, Hampden, Hopewell, Leesburg, Mechanicsburg, New Cumberland, Silver Spring, Shippensburg District, Total, and Maj. for Pierce.

The Result!

The States have all been heard from. Below we give the grand result:

Table with 2 columns: State and Votes. Lists states from Pennsylvania to California with their respective electoral votes.

The Result in Majorities.

Table with 4 columns: State, Pierce, Scott, and Difference. Shows the vote margin for each state.

General Order No. 1.

White House, Washington, D.C. To Maj. Gen. Winfield Scott, Commanding the Whig Army in the United States:

You will take up your line of march, with the whole Whig force under your command, on the 3d of November, 1852, and establish your headquarters on the banks or near the head of Salt river.

FRANKLIN PIERCE, Commander-in-Chief.

William R. King, Adj. Gen.

The President Elect.

The New York Mirror, a Whig paper, speaking of Gen. Pierce, says:

Of the President elect, we have only to repeat, that he is a man of excellent abilities, of undoubted patriotism, and of finer personal manners than any public man we have known since Mr. Clay.

And, dignified and courteous, he wins the warm affections of all with whom he holds intercourse. In personal popularity, he will excite any of his predecessors in the Presidential Chair.

The manner in which all his intimate friends speak of him—as "Frank Pierce, a good fellow," is a sufficient indication of the friendship he inspires.

Sir JOHN FRANKLIN—Hope is still entertained that the expedition under Sir John Franklin, which was discovered by Sir Edward Belcher, who is engaged in the search, has found open water up the Wellington Channel, the direction which it is supposed Sir John Franklin took; and if so, it is probable that the next year will disclose his fate.

The exertions which have been made to find him are creditable to humanity, and we rejoice that our country has participated in them.

Look at the Majorities!

Table with 2 columns: State and Votes. Lists states from Pennsylvania to South Carolina with their respective electoral votes.

General Order No. 1.

White House, Washington, D.C. To Maj. Gen. Winfield Scott, Commanding the Whig Army in the United States:

You will take up your line of march, with the whole Whig force under your command, on the 3d of November, 1852, and establish your headquarters on the banks or near the head of Salt river.

FRANKLIN PIERCE, Commander-in-Chief.

William R. King, Adj. Gen.

The President Elect.

The New York Mirror, a Whig paper, speaking of Gen. Pierce, says:

Of the President elect, we have only to repeat, that he is a man of excellent abilities, of undoubted patriotism, and of finer personal manners than any public man we have known since Mr. Clay.

And, dignified and courteous, he wins the warm affections of all with whom he holds intercourse. In personal popularity, he will excite any of his predecessors in the Presidential Chair.

The manner in which all his intimate friends speak of him—as "Frank Pierce, a good fellow," is a sufficient indication of the friendship he inspires.

Sir JOHN FRANKLIN—Hope is still entertained that the expedition under Sir John Franklin, which was discovered by Sir Edward Belcher, who is engaged in the search, has found open water up the Wellington Channel, the direction which it is supposed Sir John Franklin took; and if so, it is probable that the next year will disclose his fate.

The exertions which have been made to find him are creditable to humanity, and we rejoice that our country has participated in them.

OLD WINTER.

"Old winter is coming" we are told. Of course he is—and let him come, for a merry old fellow is he. Ah! the poor, take care of the poor—when he plays his bagpipe around the corners of the dwelling, or whistles his songs through the leafless branches of the trees...

INTERESTING LETTERS.

WEBSTER'S EARLY LIFE.

The following extract from a letter written by Daniel Webster to an intimate friend in New York, and dated Franklin, May, 3d, 1846, we find published in the New York Commercial Advertiser:

I have made satisfactory arrangements respecting my house here, the best of which is that I can leave it where it is, and yet be comfortable, notwithstanding the railroad. This house faces due North. Its front windows look toward the river Merrimack. But the river soon turns to the South, so that the Eastern wind looks toward the river also. But the river has deepened its channel in the stretch of it, in the last fifty years, that we cannot see its waters, without approaching it, or going back to the higher lands behind it. The history of this change is of considerable importance in the philosophy of streams. I have observed it practically, and know something of the theory of the phenomenon; but I doubt whether the world will ever be benefited, either by my learning or by my observation in this respect.

"Looking out at the east windows, at this moment, (2 P. M.) with a beautiful sun just breaking out, my eyes sweep a rich and level plain of 100 acres. At the end of it, a third of a mile off, I see plain marble grave stones, designating the place where repose my father, my mother, my brother Joseph, and my sisters Melchior, Abigail and Sarah; good Scripture names, inherited from their Puritan ancestors.

"My father: Ebenezer Webster—born at Kingston, in the lower part of the State, in 1739—the handsomest man I ever saw, except my brother Ezekiel, who appeared in the world, when I was born, to me, the very finest human form that ever I laid eyes on. I saw him in his coffin—a white forehead—a tinged cheek—a complexion as clear as heavenly light. But where am I straying? The grave has closed upon him, so that he lies on all my brothers and sisters. We shall soon be all together. But this melancholy—and I leave it. Dear, dear kindred blood, how I love you all!

"This fair field is before me. I could see a lamb on any part of it. I have ploughed it, and sowed it, and heeded it, and I never mowed it. Somehow, I could never learn to hang a scythe! I had not wit enough. My brother Jos used to say that my father sent me to college, not to make me equal to the rest of his children.

"Of a hot day in July—it must have been one of the last years of Washington's administration, I was making hay, with my father, just where I now see a remaining stump about the middle of the afternoon. The Hon. Able Foster, M. C. who lived in Canterbury, six miles off, called at the house, and came into the field to see my father.

He was a worthy man, college bred, and had been a minister, but was not a person of any considerable natural powers. My father was his friend and supporter. He talked awhile in the field, and went on his way. When he was gone, my father called me to him, and we sat down beneath the elm, on a haycock. He said, "My son, that is a worthy man—he is a member of Congress—he goes to Philadelphia, and gets six dollars a day, while I toil here. It is because he had an education, which I never had. If I had had his early education, I should have been in Philadelphia, in his place. I came near it, as it was. But I missed it, and now I must work here. My dear father," said I, "you shall not work. Brother and I will work for you, and wear our hands out, and you shall rest"—and I remember to have cried, and I cry now, at the recollection. "My child," said he, "it is of no importance to me—I will live but a few years, and I shall not work. Brother and I will work for you, and wear our hands out, and you shall rest"—and I remember to have cried, and I cry now, at the recollection. "My child," said he, "it is of no importance to me—I will live but a few years, and I shall not work. Brother and I will work for you, and wear our hands out, and you shall rest"—and I remember to have cried, and I cry now, at the recollection.

"FATAL ACCIDENT.—On the 16th ult., Mary Jane, daughter of Emmor B. Steele, of Haverford township, Delaware county, while gathering chousen in a field, stumbled and fell upon the stub of a corn-stalk, which, entering the side of her neck, and severing one of the main arteries, caused her death in twenty minutes.

GEN. PIERCE'S CABINET.—Some of the papers are already speculating as to who will constitute Gen. Pierce's Cabinet. One of them says there is no doubt of the Hon. James Buchanan, of Pennsylvania, being appointed Secretary of State, and that Gen. Cobb, of Georgia, will be one of the Secretaries.

LARGE YIELD OF CORN.—John McKee, Esq., of Washington county raised, in different fields, 223 bushels of corn on one acre of ground, and 95 bushels on another.

SAD CASE OF DROWNING.—A young lady named Mary Ann Hays, aged about 16 years, daughter of Mr. Edwin Hays, of Easton, was drowned at that place on the 29th ult., in the Lehigh river, whilst attempting to draw a bucket of water. The deceased was an unusually interesting and intelligent young lady.

REPORT.—We read in the Galena Ill. Advocate, a report of a horrible crime committed in that vicinity. The father and mother of a family died last spring. Their disease was supposed to have been cholera. Recently disclosures have excited suspicion that they were poisoned by their own daughter, a girl of fifteen. A young man had been paying his attentions to her, to whom the parents objected on account of his bad character. To remove this obstacle, it is supposed that the young girl consented to and committed the horrible crime of parricide.

"The ladies of Liverpool," says a correspondent of the Boston Transcript, "are particularly to eschew those minnow-hues which, in this country, are the especial delight of most of the gentler sex; and in sunny weather are adorned, with the rest of their countrywomen, to wearing a particularly black shade, which they affix to the front of their bonnets, after the manner of the convicts covering that shelter the driver of a baggage wagon. They apply call them 'uglies'—and I know of no surer method of intensifying the natural ugliness of a homely woman, than persuading her to adopt this extraordinary contrivance."

After hypocrites, the greatest dupes the devil has are those who exhaust an anxious existence in the disappointments and vexations of business, and live miserably and meanly only to die magnificently and rich. For, like the hypocrites, the only disinterested object these men can secure themselves of, that of serving the devil, without receiving his wages; but he stands every day of his life behind a counter, until he drops from it into the grave, may negotiate many profitable bargains, but he has made a single bad one, so bad, indeed, that it counterbalances all the rest; for the empty foolery of dying rich, he has paid down his health, his happiness, and his integrity.

Did you ever see a man who was punctual who did not prosper in the long run? We don't care who or what he was, high or low, black or white, ignorant or civilized, we know that if he did as he agreed, and was punctual in all his engagements, he prospered.

For every month a woman spends in the marriage state between seventeen and twenty-one years of age, a year will be taken from the duration of her beauty and personal attractions.

The editor of the Wabash Express has been presented with a bushel of potatoes called "Tippecanoe," which he says averages a pound and a quarter each.

HON. JEFFERSON DAVIS.—This gentleman, it is said, lies dangerously ill at Jackson, Mississippi; and, if he recovers, it is feared that his sight will be lost.

Not long since one of the learned counsel in a small suit deemed it necessary to shake the testimony of a Samuel Butterworth, by impugning his veracity. A witness was called to the stand.

"Do you know Samuel Butterworth?"

"Yes."

"What is Butterworth?"

"Two and tenpence a pound, though some folks have paid as high as three shillings."

OLD WINTER.

"Old winter is coming" we are told. Of course he is—and let him come, for a merry old fellow is he. Ah! the poor, take care of the poor—when he plays his bagpipe around the corners of the dwelling, or whistles his songs through the leafless branches of the trees...

INTERESTING LETTERS.

WEBSTER'S EARLY LIFE.

The following extract from a letter written by Daniel Webster to an intimate friend in New York, and dated Franklin, May, 3d, 1846, we find published in the New York Commercial Advertiser:

I have made satisfactory arrangements respecting my house here, the best of which is that I can leave it where it is, and yet be comfortable, notwithstanding the railroad. This house faces due North. Its front windows look toward the river Merrimack. But the river soon turns to the South, so that the Eastern wind looks toward the river also. But the river has deepened its channel in the stretch of it, in the last fifty years, that we cannot see its waters, without approaching it, or going back to the higher lands behind it. The history of this change is of considerable importance in the philosophy of streams. I have observed it practically, and know something of the theory of the phenomenon; but I doubt whether the world will ever be benefited, either by my learning or by my observation in this respect.

"Looking out at the east windows, at this moment, (2 P. M.) with a beautiful sun just breaking out, my eyes sweep a rich and level plain of 100 acres. At the end of it, a third of a mile off, I see plain marble grave stones, designating the place where repose my father, my mother, my brother Joseph, and my sisters Melchior, Abigail and Sarah; good Scripture names, inherited from their Puritan ancestors.

"My father: Ebenezer Webster—born at Kingston, in the lower part of the State, in 1739—the handsomest man I ever saw, except my brother Ezekiel, who appeared in the world, when I was born, to me, the very finest human form that ever I laid eyes on. I saw him in his coffin—a white forehead—a tinged cheek—a complexion as clear as heavenly light. But where am I straying? The grave has closed upon him, so that he lies on all my brothers and sisters. We shall soon be all together. But this melancholy—and I leave it. Dear, dear kindred blood, how I love you all!

"This fair field is before me. I could see a lamb on any part of it. I have ploughed it, and sowed it, and heeded it, and I never mowed it. Somehow, I could never learn to hang a scythe! I had not wit enough. My brother Jos used to say that my father sent me to college, not to make me equal to the rest of his children.

"Of a hot day in July—it must have been one of the last years of Washington's administration, I was making hay, with my father, just where I now see a remaining stump about the middle of the afternoon. The Hon. Able Foster, M. C. who lived in Canterbury, six miles off, called at the house, and came into the field to see my father.

He was a worthy man, college bred, and had been a minister, but was not a person of any considerable natural powers. My father was his friend and supporter. He talked awhile in the field, and went on his way. When he was gone, my father called me to him, and we sat down beneath the elm, on a haycock. He said, "My son, that is a worthy man—he is a member of Congress—he goes to Philadelphia, and gets six dollars a day, while I toil here. It is because he had an education, which I never had. If I had had his early education, I should have been in Philadelphia, in his place. I came near it, as it was. But I missed it, and now I must work here. My dear father," said I, "you shall not work. Brother and I will work for you, and wear our hands out, and you shall rest"—and I remember to have cried, and I cry now, at the recollection. "My child," said he, "it is of no importance to me—I will live but a few years, and I shall not work. Brother and I will work for you, and wear our hands out, and you shall rest"—and I remember to have cried, and I cry now, at the recollection.

"FATAL ACCIDENT.—On the 16th ult., Mary Jane, daughter of Emmor B. Steele, of Haverford township, Delaware county, while gathering chousen in a field, stumbled and fell upon the stub of a corn-stalk, which, entering the side of her neck, and severing one of the main arteries, caused her death in twenty minutes.

GEN. PIERCE'S CABINET.—Some of the papers are already speculating as to who will constitute Gen. Pierce's Cabinet. One of them says there is no doubt of the Hon. James Buchanan, of Pennsylvania, being appointed Secretary of State, and that Gen. Cobb, of Georgia, will be one of the Secretaries.

LARGE YIELD OF CORN.—John McKee, Esq., of Washington county raised, in different fields, 223 bushels of corn on one acre of ground, and 95 bushels on another.

SAD CASE OF DROWNING.—A young lady named Mary Ann Hays, aged about 16 years, daughter of Mr. Edwin Hays, of Easton, was drowned at that place on the 29th ult., in the Lehigh river, whilst attempting to draw a bucket of water. The deceased was an unusually interesting and intelligent young lady.

REPORT.—We read in the Galena Ill. Advocate, a report of a horrible crime committed in that vicinity. The father and mother of a family died last spring. Their disease was supposed to have been cholera. Recently disclosures have excited suspicion that they were poisoned by their own daughter, a girl of fifteen. A young man had been paying his attentions to her, to whom the parents objected on account of his bad character. To remove this obstacle, it is supposed that the young girl consented to and committed the horrible crime of parricide.

"The ladies of Liverpool," says a correspondent of the Boston Transcript, "are particularly to eschew those minnow-hues which, in this country, are the especial delight of most of the gentler sex; and in sunny weather are adorned, with the rest of their countrywomen, to wearing a particularly black shade, which they affix to the front of their bonnets, after the manner of the convicts covering that shelter the driver of a baggage wagon. They apply call them 'uglies'—and I know of no surer method of intensifying the natural ugliness of a homely woman, than persuading her to adopt this extraordinary contrivance."

After hypocrites, the greatest dupes the devil has are those who exhaust an anxious existence in the disappointments and vexations of business, and live miserably and meanly only to die magnificently and rich. For, like the hypocrites, the only disinterested object these men can secure themselves of, that of serving the devil, without receiving his wages; but he stands every day of his life behind a counter, until he drops from it into the grave, may negotiate many profitable bargains, but he has made a single bad one, so bad, indeed, that it counterbalances all the rest; for the empty foolery of dying rich, he has paid down his health, his happiness, and his integrity.

Did you ever see a man who was punctual who did not prosper in the long run? We don't care who or what he was, high or low, black or white, ignorant or civilized, we know that if he did as he agreed, and was punctual in all his engagements, he prospered.

For every month a woman spends in the marriage state between seventeen and twenty-one years of age, a year will be taken from the duration of her beauty and personal attractions.

The editor of the Wabash Express has been presented with a bushel of potatoes called "Tippecanoe," which he says averages a pound and a quarter each.

HON. JEFFERSON DAVIS.—This gentleman, it is said, lies dangerously ill at Jackson, Mississippi; and, if he recovers, it is feared that his sight will be lost.

Not long since one of the learned counsel in a small suit deemed it necessary to shake the testimony of a Samuel Butterworth, by impugning his veracity. A witness was called to the stand.

"Do you know Samuel Butterworth?"

"Yes."

"What is Butterworth?"

"Two and tenpence a pound, though some folks have paid as high as three shillings."

OLD WINTER.

"Old winter is coming" we are told. Of course he is—and let him come, for a merry old fellow is he. Ah! the poor, take care of the poor—when he plays his bagpipe around the corners of the dwelling, or whistles his songs through the leafless branches of the trees...

INTERESTING LETTERS.

WEBSTER'S EARLY LIFE.

The following extract from a letter written by Daniel Webster to an intimate friend in New York, and dated Franklin, May, 3d, 1846, we find published in the New York Commercial Advertiser:

I have made satisfactory arrangements respecting my house here, the best of which is that I can leave it where it is, and yet be comfortable, notwithstanding the railroad. This house faces due North. Its front windows look toward the river Merrimack. But the river soon turns to the South, so that the Eastern wind looks toward the river also. But the river has deepened its channel in the stretch of it, in the last fifty years, that we cannot see its waters, without approaching it, or going back to the higher lands behind it. The history of this change is