For toyal men, howe'er they frown,
If on their fronts they bear not,
The noblest gem that decks a crown,
The people's love—we care not.

For slavish men who bend beneath A despot yoke, yet dare not Pronounce the will, whose very breath Would rend its links—we care not.

For priestly men, who covet sway And wealth, though they declare not; Who point, like finger-posts the way They never go—we care not.

For martial men, who on their sword, Howe'er it conquers, wear not The pledges of a soldier's word, Redeemed and pure—we care not.

For legal men who plead for wrong, And though, to lies they swear not, Are hardly better than the throng Of those who do—we care not:

For courtly men, who feed upon
The land, like grubs, and spare not
The smallest leaf, where they can sun
Their orawling timbs—we care not.

For wealthy men, who keep their mines In darkness hid, and share not he paltry ore with him who pines In honest want—we care not.

For prudent men, who hold the power Of love aloft, and bare not Their hearts in any guardless hour To beauty's shaft—we care not.

For all, in short, on land or sea, In camp or court, who are not, Who never wank, or n'er will be Good men and true—we care not Stick to It.

The very doctrine of all others. "Stick to it."

Who sere knew a mortal to enrol himself under this banner, and come out the little end of the horn? Nobody, well be bound. Its principle, acted up to with rectitude, purpose, heart and sool, would keep any man abovo water and in blue sky.

"Stick to it." It's the very history of success in epitome. All history, all experience; the triumph of mind, art, literature, every great and no-ble work is its direct and appropriate illustration. He who would be, do, gain, make, save, achieve anything in whatever department of life, trade, politics, religion, philanthropy, or love, must make it its first and last object of solicitude—the Alpha and Omega of his aspiration and action.

Tell us, young nan, who ever did at thing work of any of the proposition of the p in London, was interrogated as to his knowledge of the sacred character of an oath, and replied—"A man who tells a lie will have nothing but pain bereafter (pointing to the fire.) The spirit of a good man will leave his body and go to heaven. The truth is always told when the heart is warm (purely directed.) God is Johovah in Heaven. The body dies—goes to dust. The sout lives after death. It never dies. The oath I take is like a prayer, calling upon God to look and see that what I say is true."

A female teacher of a school, that stood on the A lomale teacher of a school, that shood on the banks of a quiet English stream, once wished to communicate to her pupils an idea of faith. While she was trying to explain the meaning of the word, a small covered boat glided in sight along the stream. Seizing upon the incident for an illustration, she exclaimed:

"If I were to tell you that there was a leg of mutton in that heat you would believe me; would mutton in that boat, you would believe me; would you not, even without vering it yourselves!"

"Yas ma'am," replied the children.

"Well, that is faith."

The next day, in order to test their recollection of the lesson she inquired.

"What is faith?"

"A leg of mutton in a b at" was the answer, shouted from all parts of the school room.

This blessed to die early, when purity accom-panies us to the fourb. We can hear to gaze upon the pale sweet face of a child, half buried in its pillow of flowers, for we feet that the innocent is well. But our heart sickens, our mind becomes unsettled, when we know that the being lying in her narrow house before us perished in sin.—Young, fair, lovely, affectionate, yet erring. The fruit of pleasure perished in ashes upon her lip. fruit of pleasure perished in ashes upon her lip, and she is now—what?

It so happened the one who was the most and and fearless of the party, took a seat immediately before the desk of the preacher. It had a goodly fleece of hair on his head, and that on his forehead being combed up, afforded a fine chance to take possession by setzure. In the midst of the decourse, the preacher leaned over the desk and grasped this person by leaned over the desk and grasped this person by

ABSENCE OF MIND. -The foreman of a grand ABERNOE OF MIND.—The toreman of a grand jury in Missouri, after administering an oath to a beautiful woman, instead of handing the Bible, presented his face and said—"Now kies the book, madam!" He didn't discover his mistake until the whole jury burst into a roar of laughter.
