DIED, On Thursday evening the 19th instant, at his residence in this borough, Col. George M'Frell, in the 74th year of his age.
The deceased had been suffering for some months from spasmodic attacks, resembling a disease of the heart, but was enabled to be out and for the nost part he appeared in good health for a person of his years. His last attack was of such severity that he had no hopes of his recovery, and released to have a physician in attendance, as he knew his days were numbered. He felt his own pulse as the strands of life were loosening, and such that the strands of life were loosening, and such that the strands of life were loosening, and such that the strands of life were loosening and such that the strands of life were loosening. while talking calmly and composedly to his family of the change about to take place with him and thom, predicted almost the very hour of his dissolution. He was entirely reconciled to his late, said he had lived the usual time allotted to man, that he know his time. that he knew his time had come, and he felt pre pared for the change. He confinued to converse with his family up until almost within the minute of his death, and walked across the room but five minutes before he expired. He had, however, been dying all day, as he himself knew, and as his physician, who called to pay him a friendly and not a professional visit, had told him. Ilipulse was gone at 11 o'clock, A. M., and he breathed his last a little after 8 o'clock, P. M.—He was a brave, true and good man, in the just sense of those terms, and he fought the battle of life well. He knew the generous pulsations of his own heart, and scorning all hypocri-yhimself he despised it in others. He descred to be useful in his day and generation, and in this he had be no pared for the change. He continued to convers in his day and generation, and in this he had been eminerally successful; and after having spent in re-train the allotted time of man upon the carth, but of years and full of honors, he half as eep as his fathers had before the

The life of Col. M'FEELY had been an eventful one. During the difficulties which existed between the United States and Great Britain, which finally led to the war of 1812 he had sustained the patriotic side of the controversy, supported the Democratic administration of President Madison, and approved of the various measures taken to redress our grievances. In this he was not an redress our grievances. In this he was not singular among the population of the Cumberland vailey, for during that war there were more volunteers from this section of the State than from any other, who marched to the Canada fronters and in the defence of Baltimore. Among our patriotic citizens Col. Al-Prezr stood prominent, and was appointed Lieut. Col. of the 16th Regiment of U. S. Infantry, on the 14th day of March, 1812, by President Madison. This was some time before the declaration of war against Great Britain, but when war was confidently anticipated the recruited at this place (Carlisle Barracks.) until the 5th October, 1812, when he marched with a detachment of the 223 Regiment of U. S. Infantry, (having been transferred) to Buffaloe, New York, and reported to Gen. Forsyth. From New York, and reported to Gen. Forsyth. From there he was ordered to Fort Niagara, which place he defended under a severe cannonade on the 21st. Nivember, 1813, the particulars of which are detailed in Brackingting, 8 his ory of the war, to which the reader is referred. On the 27th May, 1813, he was already. 1813, he was placed to the van of the attack of Fort George, in Upper Canada, which fort was taken after a sovere engagement at the landing; Licut, Col. Scott (now Major General Scott.) led the van in this attack, whose regiment, together with Lout, Col. a republican of the Jeffersonian school, stern, de-cided, unyielding and vigorous. He had great confidence in man's capacity for self-government, and believed in the gradual improvement and per-fectability of the human race. This he thought would be effected by natural and rational means, rather than by any minaculous interposition. He was a consistent and energetic advocate of the cause of education in all its variety of forms, and was connected with our Common Schools as a Director for more than fourteen years. He may well be said to be one of the fathers of the system among us, being one among those who have derouse muon of the system in perfection to the establishment of the system in perfection of detail and in full usefulness, with no other reward than the consciousness of having done his duty to the tising generation. His loss in the public schools and the community that the state of the community that the co rising generation. It is loss in the public semious and the community at large, will long be seriously felt. He leaves an interesting family to mourn his loss, and to whom he was an entertaining companion and friend as well as husband and father. readers may like to know something of this lady, of whose name by the young Duke of Alva, brought on the two Soule Duels, we give the following brief sketch of this remarkable lady:

"Mary of Burgindy was the only daughter of Charles the Rash, Duke of Burgundy, and of Isabelle de Bourbon, his second wife. She was born in 1457, and on the death of her father, which occurred whom she was only twenty one years old, she became the heir of his vast estates. She was one of the most beautiful women of her ago, was gentle, modest, accomplished, and conspicuous for her constant regard for duty. She married Maximilian, son of the Emperor Frederick III, and died at the early age of twenty five, in consequence of the neglect of a wound received in falling from her horse, which her excessive modesty prevented her from making known to any one."

Thus it seems that the sneer of the Duke was at the nodesty of Mrs. Soule, who did not choose to appear in the abanden style which is in vogue at the cheap and Black Alpaces which will be add very cheap.
