CONRAD IN 1841.

It will hardly be believed, says the Washington Union, that the following eloquent passages are taken from a speech, delivered in Philadelphia, on the 5th of July, 1841, by Judge Conrad, the present Mayor of that city, before the Philadelphia Repeal Association.

"I am one of those who would cherish our national Sabbath. Properly spent, they inspire us with a holy political charity, a divine brotherhood of fellow-men, and a sense of our common country to our common parent—that all her sons, of whatever clime or class, are our brethren, and that their happiness demands the exercise of fellow-men and liberty to all her sons."

"Our other fellow celebrates the nation's birth. On this day the sun, as it rises and throws its beams over thousands of miles of field, and wood, and prairie, and savanna, is greeted on American soil, by a million of our fellow-men, who will turn to him in his present position with amazement and with sorrow."
