HEARY HISTORY.

Once upon a time, a maiden,
Saw beneath a Hawthorn tree,
And her lover clasped her waist...

Both were young, and fond and foolish;
Neither rich, the story goes;
Ma was proud, and Pa was nullish...

Pshaw! whistled a wealthy banker,
(Shander whispered she was sold),
And no city dancé entrant her;

Learn from this, ye doating lovers,
In your aggrail, not to break
Any of your great vows...

DRYDEN, spare that whip!
Don't touch on me with that
That harrasses my lip...

That old familiar face,
From whips of great renown,
Cut once a mighty dash...

DRYDEN, spare that whip!
Don't touch on me with that
That harrasses my lip...

DRYDEN, spare that whip!
Don't touch on me with that
That harrasses my lip...

A LEAP FOR LIFE.

BY WILLIAM BURTON.

After my discharge from the hospital at Havana, I shipped in the American barque Independence, Captain Robert I., bound to Valparaiso, and then round the Horn to the West Indies.

We had not been a week out, ere very great dissatisfaction prevailed among the crew, for the captain, with unaccountable perversity, did not allow us half enough of victuals.

Our first mate offered remuneration with his conduct, and plainly told him that he would not submit to it; but that he would only obey the captain's orders.

THE RECOGNITION.

A PLEASANT SKETCH.

'Well, I think it is likely; but don't tease me any more. Your brother has married a girl who is a great deal better than you.

'What do you mean by that? It is not true. I never forgive him, if they all starve together.'

'This speech was addressed to a lovely girl, scarcely eighteen; beautiful as the lily that hid in the garden.'

'Dear father do forgive him; you don't know what a beautiful girl he has married, and—'

'What do you say? interrupted the father; 'a boy! have I a grand child? Why, Ellen, I never knew that before! but I think it likely.'

'Well, you just see her, now—she is so good, and the little boy, she has just brought home, will not do it angrily, and in much heat and discomposure of spirit.'

'What do you say? interrupted the father; 'a boy! have I a grand child? Why, Ellen, I never knew that before! but I think it likely.'
