From the Phila. Sunday Mercury. Sketch of an English Country Vicar's Life

BY HARMAN REEVES. It was in the latter part of last June, that started from London to visit my old college chum—Temple, of Trinity. We had not met for many years, so after dinner, when the bustle of my arrival had somewhat subsided. Temple and I walked in the garden and I could not help congratulating him on his happy home. Yes, he said, thank God it is a happy home to me, and I do not eavy the lot of any human being. It was a long time though, before things went so casy with me.

"How was that?" I asked.

"How was that ? I asked.
"Why, you see my father wanted me to go into the law; and it was with very bad grace he let me go into the church. Then I was engaged to my wife, and her family, who were very rich, wanted something better than a journeyman parson, as they called me; and as I could not have her with money, I took her without, which was the best day's work I ever did.—This curacy was vacant; I applied and got it without any difficulty, as the rector was an arch-deacon, who had never put his foot in the parish for twenty years, and it was overun with dissenters.

Lord II, took me warmly by the hand. By degrees we weeded out the mischief makers and got the parish into good order. Times however, went hard with me; I had a wife and three children, and our income was not £200 a year.

'Lord II. sent me his son as a pupil, and the paid, I can tell you. However, his son could not be a boy forever, and he went into the army, poor boy, and was killed.

'One odd morning I took up the paper and saw the death of the rector. My wife was mad for me to run off for Lord II., and ask for the little are it was his tray to nominate an incum.

'One our most the death of the rector.

Whilst we were still discussing the question, the church bells struch up in a way I never heard bells ring before or since, save and except when I was married. I went into the village to find out the reason. One of the farmers, with a long face, told me Lord H. had or village to find out the reason. One of the farmers, with a long face, told me Lord H. had ordered the ringers to ring in the new vicar, as he heard, but he we going to see.

'My heart fairly sunk within me, for I always thought until that moment, Lord H. would give me the living.

'I rushed into the house, and met the first repreachful look I had ever had from my wife, as she muttered, 'This is all your fuult.

'I saw Lord H. coming in the private way, and I fear I felt so angry I could have struck him, for I thought he at least, need not have come to apprise me of the new appointment.—As he entered the door, I said mechanically, 'My Lord, I will go out in a week.'

'He looked frightened at my appearance, and as he afterwards told me, he dreaded the news would be too good. In fact, he looked as much gehast as I did.

'He put into my hands a paper with as serious a face as if it was my death warrant. My wife's eye detected the mitro in the seal, in an instant, and of course fainted right off, which was my first intimation that I was vicar of this parish. I sat down in my easy chair, leaving Lord H. to pick up Mary, which he did; and although I had stood up so long against adversity, my good fortune overcame me, and I cried like a child. sity, my good fortune overcame me, and I cried like a child.

I slunk out quielly the back way, and got into the park, as I longed to be alone. I was only just in time. The news had spread like wildlife, and the whole parish came running down to the vicarage to shake hands with their new parson, which I could never have stood. The Barley Mow made a little fortune on the spot, and I fear I am answerable for an extraordinary amount of beer being drunk.

When I got on the top of the hill, and looked down on this happy village, and knew it was my home for life, and that I should live and die here, my heart was full indeed.

'As I sat there runinating on my good fortune, I saw the crowd assembling in the park. Lord II. obtained a general holiday for everybody. There were tables down the avenues, greaning with roast beef and plum pudding, and before my flock separated for the evening. I was calm enough to appear amongst them.

'As I was no longer a 'journeyman parson,' and my preferment came from a peer, my wife's relations began to be very civil, as a matter of course, and one of her aunts altered her will and part in a codicil leaving £10,000; so in the whole we fell into great prosperity, and I trust, he added, we shall always remember it, and heaven knows, I have not been ignorant of what it is to want a shilling."

With these words Temple closed his simple narrative, and we retired towards the house.

"Of all the countries I have visited, of all the vile, immoral places I have ever seen of heard of, in savage or civilized lands, the gambling saloons in California are the worst. I wont thure in company with friends; the doors were open; everything invited entrance. Splendor in every form, temptation most subtle and powerful, combined to lare the soul and body to dostruction. Splendid curtains, carpets, exquisitely painted pictures, whose subjects were so inpure that I have involuntarity placed my hands over my eyes—wines, liquors of all kinds free, and to be had for the asking, all combined to lure the poor moral to sin and death. Yet all was so voluptuously respectable, so perfect in good taste, so refined in appearance, so beautiful to the eye, that its influence stole into the soul, like the deadly polson of the upas tree. What wonder if with awakened passions, and brain made insane by liquor, allured by lovely women, who preside at the table and everylook the game, with gold around and on every side of him, the poor victim rushed to the game, with gold around and on every side of him, the poor victim rushed to the game, with gold around and on every side of him, the poor victim rushed to the game, with gold around and on every side of him, the poor victim rushed to the game, with gold around and on every side of him, the poor victim rushed to the game, with gold around and on every side of him, the poor victim rushed to the game and the great variety of ready made clothing, suitable for all seasons, made to this own supervision, the sure under this own supervision to purchasers. The A celebrated clergyman, who paid particular attention to the conversation of pretty females, one ovening at a "moeting" (a revives) was going the round as usual whisporing words of consolution and advice to all, in his peculiar, y affectionate manner, when his attention words attracted by a female dressed in deep monrhing, apparently in deep auffering. He could not perceive her features, for her face was velled, but her beautiful white hand sud landsone form were sulficient to elicit his warmest sympatity. Quickly he came to her to assuage her grief, gently he leaned over the pew—oh, he was such a good man—stealthly he passed his arm around har neck, he breathed soft words into her car, how sweetly he spoke. Sob after sob, and the clergyman grew more loquacious. Finally the vall was raised, sobs were hushed, a volce came forth, "that'll do John—that's quite eneugh?" She was his wife, and had purposely disglused herself, to test the truth of reports the had heard respecting her husband's fidelity.

A PUZZEED JUDGE.—A man was arrested in Ohio recently for getting drunk. He pleaded that he had not been guilty of violation of the new law, and claimed the right of being tried by the old, on the ground that he got drunk under the old law, and hadn't been sober since. The Judge was puzzled and held the case over for advisement.

THE subscriber takes this method to inform I his friends and the public in general, that he has taken this well known stand, and hopes, by strict attention to business, to gain a share of the public patronage herotofore so liberally extended to him while in the above business in Lancaster county, and recently in Cumberland county, Pa. The House has been neatly furnished throughout, and the rooms are large and airy, and for comfort are unsurpassed in the city. The Tanks is always supplied with the best the market can afford, and his Ban can compete for choice liquors with the best bars in the City. The Stanuss are large and newly fitted up for drovers and the public in general.

My charges are as reasonable as any other in Market street. Give me a call.
