THE ADVANCE OF PROSCRIPTION.

It is a fact well substantiated by historical experience, that the tide of proscription, when since on the flow, obeys no inherent law of ebiling. The course of all crastices against each so the flow, obeys no inherent law of ebiling. The course of all crastices against each so the flow, obeys no inherent law of ebiling. The course of all crastices against each so the flow, obeys no inherent law of ebiling. The course of all crastices against each so bodies of men, for their religious opinions, has exhibited the same heartless, unstellating progress. The storm of proscription lovels every obstacle that, opposes its fury, until some counter intenence is set up of sufficient power to turn back the blast, and thus calm the tempest. The evil passions of the human heart, like tigers, feed upon the blood of their victims, and become more ferocious after each foul and demoniac repast. These are the self-evident truths we alluded to at the outset of our opposition of Know-Kothing lodges, with their bigoted and intolerant doctrines. The inevitable tendency of their principles was pointed out, their offspring predicated, and the consequences resulting from their promulgation pictured in all the bold and vivid colors of truth and fairness. The lessons of history were recited to prove that, though it was one particalar religious sect which was a pressed into a law. The French government has asked for a loan of five hundred millions of trants. The knife once whetted, more victims would be demanded to satisfy the appetite of this Moloch of proscription and intolerance.

How has that prediction been verified?—
Has the storm-cloud spent its fury—the tempest its rage? Are the people satisfied with the mischief they have accombilished, the bitter waters they have accombilished to the first principles was pointed and t the contrary. The cry is enward, with bloody hands, and hearts that feel no ties of brothershood, no commune of interests. Bishop Hopkins, a distinguished prelate of the Episcopal Church, in his late lecture on 'Naturalization', declared that he "would be glad to see the time when elitizenship would be glad to see the time when elitizenship would be denied to Deists. Atheists, Pantheists, or persons not believing in future rewards and punishments." In this can be seen the legitimate fruits of that spirits of intolerance which is the fountain from whence the Know-Nothing order springs. They pandered to that morbid sentiment against of intolerance which is the fountain from whence the Know-Nothing order springs. They pandered to that morbid sentiment against one particular religious sect, which exists in some particular religious sect, which exists in some particular religious sect, which exists in some portion of our citizens, but the Rev-lecturer, whom we have quoted, maps out assisted field for future operations. The right of citizenship is to depend upon religious belief, and applicant they will not receive as bases of carting the propositions and preme arbiter instead of the Constitution, and Bishops take the places of Judges in administring the eath of citizenship. A man who be the visit of the standard creed, is to be alike rejected and made an outcast from all political rights in a country whose boast is that all men can worship God according to the dictates of the constitution.

Sterning.—The N. Y. Day Book of Tuesday says that some lady belonging to the "upper ten" recommends that they have a soiree for preparations to the preparations to carry on the war under the pleas of negotiations. The Czar seems to be a match for the allies both in war and disjunction, and silven the present and the constitution, and silven the present and the constitution of the present worship God. according to the dictates of their own consciences. This is startling doctrine in a free country, yet it is openly announced by a Bishop of the Episcopal church, and will be eagerly engrafted upon the creed of the Know-Nothing order. All they desire is a union of Church and Stale, and what course so likely to produce that effect as to ostracise every man from the right of citizenship who does not stand with both feet upon the National religious platform? If the fact that a man believes in a particular religion is sufficient evidence to withold from him the political rights which the Constitution guarantees to all, without question as to their religion, why should not the Constitution guarantees to all, without question as to their religion, why should not the same doctrines are taught and practiced, such are the results, and there are no good reasons to believe that such will not be the ultismate termination in this Republic, if this crusters of that spirit of religions proscription which finds vent in the Know-Nothing lodges of other country, is it not Know rothing lodges of other country, is it not Know rothing lodges of the free institutions of our country to take the afarm? When the Sunday mall question was a fixed of the sunday and guestion was a fixed of the sunday and the sunday and the sunday and the law on this subject is therefore unallowed the law on this subject is therefore unallowed.

inds vent in the Know-Nothing lodges of our country, is it not time for the real lovers of the free institutions of our country to take the alarm? When the Sunday mail question was signized, the whole nation arose as one man, and denounced the attempt to overawe the National legislature by clerical influence. And yet that was a summer flaw compared to the Alpine tempest of religious fury which now howls and shricks through the land. Militia of Pennsylvania.

Cartese, January 11, 1856.

The undersigned, having been elected and commissioned, hereby assumes command of said Division, and has thought proper to promuligate the following extract for the guidance and encouragement of the gallant citizen soldiers of said Division under my command, viz.—Of all states and conditions, that of a good soldier is most honorable to himself, and most advantageous to his country.

Mankind is divided into four sorts of states or conditions, the Soldier, the Gown-Man, the Merchant, or Trader, and the Husbandman.—All these are useful and necessary to the public, the soldier toils to enlarge the dominions, disappoints the designs of enemies, and keeps the citizens or subjects in their obedience to the State; the Gown-Man trakes the laws flourish, blinders the strongest from oppressing the weak, and curbs wicked men by the fears of punishment; the Merchant-Trader exports what is to spare in his own country into others, and brings back what is wanting, bringing home money for that which we should else be over-stocked with, and furnishing all that is necessary and luxury ment, the Merchant-Fracter exports what is a ment, the Merchant-Fracter exports what is wanting, bringing home money for that which we should take be over-stocked with, and turnishing all that is necessary and luxury can crave; the Husbandman plows and sow, and his labor is beneficial to the rich and poor, though all these could metal in the country, as that of a soldier, for if we do but observe the change of the husband man plows and sow, and his labor is beneficial to the rich and poor, though all these could be something to the change of the husband man plows and sow, and his labor is beneficial to his country, as that of a soldier, for if we do but observe the changes to which he daily exposes himself, can it hold most dear for the safety of his country, even to the last drop of his blood, so his country, even to the last drop of his
