OUR NATIONAL SUBBATH.

To-day (Wednesday) is the 4th of July orable in the history of the United states—a day to be revered by every American itizen as long as our country has a name. To-day seventy-nine years ago our forefathers pledged their lives, their fortunes, and their sacred honor to average the wrongs that had been inflicted upon them by the mother country, and most faithfully and effectually, did they redeem the pledge. To their patriotism, fidelity and heroism are we indebted for the freedom we now enjoy, and it is but natural and right that every American heart should throb with a more lively impulse at each return of our National Sabbath.

When we take a retrospective view of the civilized world, and compare the different countries and governments with our own, it is then tries and governments with our own, it is then the sample of the sample

Our wide domain, bound and cemented together by telegraph, by rail-road, by canal, and turnpike, thus opening up all our vast avenues o commerce and trade from one end of the Union to the other, makes this, of all others, the land for the weary pilgrims of earth to tarry in and feel happy. And although we cannot as yet, boast of as many splendid palaces, lofty spires, or towering domes as some of the older countries, we can revert, with just pride to ou model system of government-to the number of our churches, school-houses, Colleges, and Seminaries of learning-to our free and inde pendent yeomanry-to the comfort and general ty has selected its candidates for the various prosperity of our people-to our many happy
