"The oldest inhabitant could not recognize it now. Climbing up the Redan, which was fearfully cumbered with the dead, we witcessed the scene of the desperate attack and defence which cost both sides so much blood. The ditch out, side made one sick; it was piled up with English dead, some of them secreted and blackened by the explosion and others lacerated beyond recognition. The quantity of broken galions and gun carriages here was extraordinary; the ground was covered with them. The bomb proofs were the same as in the Malakoff, and la of them a music book was found, with a waman's name in it, and a canary bird and vasc of flowers were outside the entrance."

THE ESTATE OF DANIEL WRBSTER.—We extract the following from the Washington Star:

Mr Webster has now been in his grave, very near three years, and his executors have not than a year ago, and before they had the power to plead the act of limitation which they now, a claim against the estate that the debts of Mr. Webster amounted to $140,000, but that his property was valued at only $40,000; More than a year ago they solemnly promised, that in a very few days they would make a dividend of the property in their keeping, which they not yet done.

When they preclaimed that they had, sold Marshfield for the benefit of his creditors, they had done no such thing; but had only sold a variety of lots of land lying on the outskirts of Marshfield, leaving the homestead and; some three bundered areas fand entirely untouched, and in possession of a member of his family.
