Kean stared at him for some moments, and then said:

"Your name is ——?"

"It is Mr. Kean. I have had the honor of meeting you before."

"You kept some years ago a small tavern in the outskirts of this-town!?

I did, Mr. Kean. Fortune has been kind to hottle of us since then. I recollect you, sir, when you belonged to our theatre here!

"And I, sir," said Kean, jumping, "recollect you! Many years ago I came into your pality tavern, after a long juncy, with my suffering wife, and a sick child, all of us wet to the skin. Lasked you for a morsel of refreshment. You naswored me as II I were a dog, and refused to trust it out of your hands, until you had received the tribe with was its value.

I left my family by your inhospitable freside while I sought for lodgings. On my return you ordered me, like a brute, to take my wife and brut from your house,' and abused me font spending to defink the money I had for food. Fortine, as you say, has done something for us both since then, but you are still the same I side—the same cringing, grasping, grinding, creedy money hunter. I, sir.'am still the same. I am now in my zenith—I was then at its nadir, but I am the stime man—the same Kean whom you ordered from your doors; and I have now the same latred to oppression that I had then, and were it my last meal, I'd note at nor drink in a house belonging to so heartless a scoundrel?"
