TERRIBLE DISASTER AT SEA!

board the steamer was 104, or woon 40 sets passengers. She also had on board about $20,000 in specie on freight.

The Lyonnaise, when last seen by those on board the boat picked up, was still allont, with her stern above the water's edge and her bows high out of water. The sufferings of the sarddly were terrible, they having been exposed for six days in the open boat. They encountered several severe snow storms, and their limbs were direadfully frozen. They are, however, we are thappy to state, itsely to recover.

At the time of the collision, the night was dark, and a strong wind blowing. The lights were up, and every precaution had been taken on board the steamer. The fog whistle was in fall operation at the time. The fog whistle was in fall operation at the time. The fog whistle was constructed at the Novelty Works, expressly for the Lyonnaise, and being a very powerful one, could be heard for many miles.

The party in the boat had no bread or water, no place to lay down, and nothing to cat but wheat and preserves. There were, originally 18 persons on the boat, but two died from thirst, fatigne and cold, and were thrown overboard. The steamer had five boats, of which two were life boats. One of the latter was swamped in launching. The other contained the rescued 16. ed also.

There are three boats now out, therefore—all manned by experienced officers; each of them has a compass, and all have sails—so that it is highly probable that the thissing may yet be aved. The Lyonnaise had five water-tight compartments, but when the collision took place the water rushed in at the stern with irresistable force—breaking through the first compartment, and then into the second, at the same time, so that all the steering apparatus, with the propeller, were swept away.

with the propeller, were swept away.

The raf, was well provided with sails, a compass, and provisions sufficient to last two amounts. It was constructed in the strongest mer, and with the atmost deliberation. there being plenty of time to fit it out as per feetly as possible.

The steamer Marion has been chartered to go in search of the Lyonnaise, as it is believed she to suit affoat. She was built in Liverpool in the latter part of 1835, to run between Havre and Rio, but was placed temporarily on the new French line to New York. She was 2200 tons burthen, was valued at $335,000 and fully insured to France and England.

lowing description of the loss of the steamer:

"Just immediately after the passengers and many of the crew had retred, leaving the watch on deck, a three masted vessel was observed bearing down upon us.

We did all in our power to avoid a collision with her by ringing our bells and blowing our steam wheste to warn her of our viennty; but before we could head off she struck in amid ships, tearing out an entire square of the plate iron. The water rushed in with great force, and although every effort was usade to stop the hole, by plugging it with mattresses, quilts, pilloys, &c., it was discound. e, by plugging it with mattresses, quits, nws, &c., it was discoved the water was

Half an hour had hardly chapsed ere the fires Half an hour had hardly clansed ere the fires in the furnaces were quenched. The steam pumps having previously become choked with coal, were of little service in freeing the ship. All on board were seized with panie, and it was with difficulty that the captain could calm the fears of the passengers, and induce the crew to bail the ship. He finally succeeded in mustering the crew together, and, with the aid of the passengers, who formed in bailing parties, rigged a cable in the hold, and by this means was caabled to reach the water.

It seems that little Johnny and little Tominy wanted to have a game at hoop rolling; but where to get the hoops was a difficulty. Mamma wouldn't let them run over to the cooper's; what were they to do? At last Johnny thought of a plan and whispered it to Tominy. Said he, "You know! Mamma's great rew thing, that she got at Holmes', and put into our roun, because the armoig wasn't big enough to hold it?" "Yes," answered Temmy. "Well, sister Jane told me it was full-of hoops! Now, I'm going to take my knife and cut 'un out. Then we'll have plenty to play with." "Oh yes! do it. Johnny. Won't it be so nice."

So mater Johnny forthwith went into his chamber, pulled down mamma's "great new thing," and in a short time had it divested of its 'fair proportions." The young scamps were laughing over their handwork, when mamma, who was just preparing to walk out on a visit, and had proceeded thus far in making her toilette, came into the room for the article aforesaid. At a glance she saw the mischief that had been done, and with a shrick fell fainting on the floor.

Goodness! gracious! But were not the boys frightened! In a twinkling they were off as fast as their heels could carry them. Where they went to we can't say, (we don't suppose they went to we can't say, (we don't suppose they knew themselves;) how long they stayed how long mamma was in recovering, we are mable to say. But we rather incline to the belief that masters Johnny and Tomoy "caught scissors" at last, and that it will be some time before they again cut such capers with hoops.
