WHAT IS LIFE?
BY HENRY W. LONGFELLOW.

Life is not in mortal numbers,
Nor in the empty dream;
For the soul is dead that slumbers,
And things are not what they seem.
Life is not in the earnest,
And the grave is not its goal;
'Tis the soul that is immortal,
Not the body that we hold.
Not enjoyment, and not sorrow,
Is our destined end or way;
But to act, each to the power,
Finds us farther than to-day.
Art is long, and time is fleeting,
And our hearts, though stout and brave,
Still, like muffled drums, are beating
Funeral marches to the grave.
In the world's broad field of battle,
In the bivouac of life,
Be not like dead, unwarlike cattle,
But stand next the heroic die!
Trust no future, how'er pleasant,
Let the dead interment take,
And in the living present,
Heart within, and God's own hand,
Lives of all great men remind us,
We can make our lives sublime,
And departing leave behind us,
Footprints on the sands of time.
Footprints that perhaps another,
Sailing o'er life's solemn main,
A friend, or a shipwrecked brother,
Seeing, shall thank heart glad.
Let us, then, be up and doing,
With a heart for any fate;
Still achieving, still pursuing,
Least to labor and to wait.

MARY.

She blossomed in the country,
Where sunny summer flings
Her rays around the earth,
And brightest blessings bring.
Her heart was full of love,
And grace her soul did bring.
I never dreamed the wildwood
Contained so sweet a flower.
Far distant from the city,
And inland from the sea,
My Mary blossomed in goodness,
As pure as juncus could be.
She caught her dewy freshness
From hill and mountain dew,
I never dreamed the wildwood
Contained so sweet a flower.
The rainbow must have lent her
Some of its airy grace;
The wild rose parted with a blush
That sweetened her face.
The sunbeam got entangled in
The long waves of her hair,
Or she had never grown to be
So neat and so fair.
The early birds have taught her
Her joyous song to sing,
And some of their soft innocence,
She's been with them so long.
And for her heart's sweet melody,
I never dreamed the wildwood
Contained so sweet a flower.

SUB IS DYING.

The following is sublimely beautiful and poetic, and could only have been dictated by a heart that has experienced all the bitterness that is therein expressed. Who is the author, we know not, but suspect it is an extract from some book. If anybody can read it without moisture in the eye, and stones in the throat, they are worthy of marble:
Sun is Dying—Hush! she is dying. The sunlight streams through the plate glass windows, the room is fragrant with the sweet breath of the Southern flowers—large, milk-white African lilies—rose, a nightingale would stoop to worship—Cape Jasmine, and camellias, with their large glossy leaves.
Through the open casement steals the faint misty light of evening, fountains and the light tempered, pleasantly by rose curtains of embroidered satin, blouses up gorgeous paintings with a halo as bright as a rainbow. It is as if fresher sunshine were falling earthward on the bowers of beauty.
The canary sings in his galled cage—her canary—and the mocking-bird raises her clear note higher and higher on the perfumed air.
Why do you clench your hands till the nails draw blood through the fingers? Why do you quiver skin? Why do you grind your teeth together, and hiss between them that word, "blessed"? It's a beautiful name, I'm sure; and that lady, who had her head upon her bosom, is as fat as any dream vision of the painter.
Surely, nothing could be purer than that broad, high brow, nothing brighter than those golden curls.
And she loves you, too! Ah, yes, any one can read that in the deep violet eyes, raised so tenderly to your own. Ah! that it is your young wife loves you.
She linked to yours the existence of an angel, when she kneels beside you at the marriage altar, and places her, and in yours. For twelve long, golden, sunny months, an angel has walked or sat by your side, or slept in your bosom.
You know it! No mortal woman ever made your heart bow before a purity so divine!
No earthly embrace ever so filled your soul with the glory from beyond the stars; no earthly smile ever dawned so radiantly above all such noxious things as your earth worms call each and trouble: "She is an angel, and other things have been singing to her in the long days of this pleasant thing, reflect in your bosom."
"Hush," you say, "but you can't shut out the anthem-note of Heaven from those unsated ears! Louder, higher, swell the hymns of the seraphs; brighter grows the smile on your young wife's lips."
She whispers, "Dearest, I'm almost home, and you still come by and by, and I'm going to ask God to bless you!" But you cannot bear to turn away, and big tears gather in your eyes.
"You had held her on your bosom all day—all night—were you tired? But you cannot answer. Closer, closer you clasp the slight, fair figure; faintly you press your lips to the cold bow—Cecilia is dead!"
"What is it to you that the sunshine is bright?—What that its cheerful rays fall on the broad land?—What is it—now that she can look on them no more! And what is death—has death

Funerals of Law.

Sterns instimates that attorneys are to lay out what apothecaries are to physicians—only that they do no deal in scruples!
One day at the table of the late Dr. Pease, (Dean of Ely,) just as the cloth was being removed, the subject of death happened to be that of an extraordinary mortality among lawyers. "We have lost," said a gentleman, "no less than six eminent barristers in as many months." The Dean, who was quite deaf, rose as his friend finished his remarks, and gave the company grace.
"For this and every other mercy, the Lord's name be praised!" The effect was irresistible.
About a hundred years ago, a Scotch gentleman bequeathed to his poor relations of whatever degree, the sum of £20,000. In effect he left them an Orphan's suit, which has remained in the family ever since. In the first place, the next of kin disputed the validity of the bequest, but it was established by Lord Chancellor Camden, and four hundred and sixty-three persons made out their relationship. Thereupon in the year 1776 a bill was filed for the distribution of the money amongst them, which had been acted to this day.
A yet stranger case was that of the "Berkeley suit," which lasted upwards of one hundred and ninety years! It was commenced shortly after the death of the fourth Lord Berkeley, in 1416, and terminated in 1609. It arose out of the marriage of Elizabeth only daughter and heiress of the above Baron with Richard Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick, their descendants having sought continually to get possession of the Castle and Lordship of Berkeley, which not only occasioned the famous law-suit in question, but was often attended by the most violent quarrels on both sides, at least during the first fifty years or more.
A lawyer, retained in a case of assault and battery, was cross examining a witness in relation to the force of a blow struck.
"What kind of a blow was given?"
"A blow of the common kind."
"Describe the blow."
"I am not good at description."
"Show me what kind of a blow it was."
"You must."
"I won't."
The lawyer appealed to the Court. The Court told the witness that if the counsel insisted upon showing what kind of a blow it was he must do so.
"Do you insist upon it?" asked the witness.
"I do."
"Well, then, since you compel me to show you, I will show you, and I will thank you, for all His kindness towards us."
The Old Gal's Story.—Was once Captain of a pocket schooner plying between Boston and Baltimore, and was one day with a frigate of the Chesapeake and a dark stormy night, wind blowing a steady gale, my mate being a little nervous, and not being acquainted with the ground, supposed the old gal was going in a few knots to sleep. I had turned in, but had not gone to sleep. Tramp—tramp—tramp—on deck—it was my mate.
"Captain, had not I better shorten sail? It's blowing like a blunder."
"No—keep her going."
"A few minutes after, tramp—tramp—tramp—on deck."
"Captain," said my mate again, "if freshens, and already blows big guns. Hadn't we better shorten sail?"
"Not a shorten," I replied, confident in my craft and knowledge of my whereabouts; "not a shorten, keep her on, and I'm his old man."
"Well," said the mate, closing the door of the companion way with an amiable slam, "to—let her rip!—we're all bound to go to—hell before morning, and I've got as many friends there as you have."
I took a glass of grog, and concluded to fore the forecast, take a reef in mainsail, and ask the mate if he had a desire to become acquainted with one Bourbon, whose surname is Whiskey.
Dark Hours.—There are dark hours, that mark the history of the brightest year. For a whole month in many of the millions of the past perhaps, had the sun shone so brilliantly all the time. And there have been cold stormy days in every year; and yet the mist and shadows of the darkest hour were dispelled and flitted heedlessly away. The greatest of the ice-fetters have been broken and dissolved, and the most furious storm loses its power to harm.
And what a parable is this of the human life—our inside world, where the heart works at its destined labors. Here, too, we have at its overshadowing of dark hours, and many a cold chill chills the heart to its core. But what matters it? Man is born a hero, and it is only by darkness and storms that heroism gains its greatest and best development and illustration—then it kindles the black cloud into a blaze of glory, and the storm bears it more rapidly to its destiny. Despair, then, is not a virtue; give up, while the good power is yours, only. Disappointment will not then be realized. Morality fails, but will attend this effort and will not only be honest and struggle on, and it will work well.
WILL CALL ANOTHER DAY.—What a world of woes is contained in those few words "I'll call another day." "I'll call another day," says the rich man, to avoid the trouble of going to his desk to get the necessary funds, and the poor mechanic is obliged to go home to disappoint his workmen, and all who depend on him for their due. It is an easy matter to work: the only real glory in life is an independent eye of being able to sustain yourself by the labor of your own hands, and to be able to help others. There is in it a grandeur and a nobility, which no man who depends upon pay for subsistence. If those who could pay would only pay at once, it would place hundreds and thousands in a condition to do likewise, and would prevent much misery and distress.

The Printer's Devil and his Love.

A printer's devil was peering in the heart of a young man, who was sitting at a table with a little miss.
"Quoth he to the lass, 'My dear, ere we part, let us seal our love with a kiss.'"
The maiden replied, "As the imp she eyed, 'Tis not that I care for a kiss, but for the love that is in it.'"
Where others before you have vainly tried—No, no, I'll not kiss the devil!"
Years rolled along, and the sweet little lass became an old sorrowful maid.
She shed like a quivering reed, but, alas! Her beauty had all decayed.
Once again they met, and the old maid tried to recall her former love.
But she gaily smiled, and softly replied, "The devil now would not kiss you."
The Charleston Duel.—A contributor of T. F. Magrath's paper, the News, under the head of "Clippings of the South," gives a description of some of his recent experiences in South Carolina, in professional duty (as a reporter) when, the unfortunate duel between Taber and Magrath took place, and he gives a more detailed account of the proceedings than any we have met with, we publish his notes.
Mr. Taber was a young man, infinitely connected with the law, I believe, rather than a student of the law. He was a brilliant man, and a very successful lawyer. He was a member of the bar, and had been practicing for some time. He was a man of great talents, and was highly respected by his fellow citizens. He was a man of great energy, and was always ready to take the lead in any good cause. He was a man of great courage, and was always ready to stand up for the rights of the oppressed. He was a man of great honor, and was always ready to do what was right, no matter what the consequences might be. He was a man of great faith, and was always ready to trust in God. He was a man of great love, and was always ready to help the poor and the needy. He was a man of great wisdom, and was always ready to give advice to those who asked for it. He was a man of great strength, and was always ready to defend the weak and the defenseless. He was a man of great beauty, and was always ready to attract the attention of the fairer sex. He was a man of great power, and was always ready to influence the course of events. He was a man of great glory, and was always ready to seek the praise of men. He was a man of great fame, and was always ready to accept the honors of his country. He was a man of great wealth, and was always ready to give to the poor. He was a man of great influence, and was always ready to lead the people. He was a man of great honor, and was always ready to die for his country. He was a man of great love, and was always ready to sacrifice himself for the good of his fellow citizens. He was a man of great faith, and was always ready to believe in the power of God. He was a man of great courage, and was always ready to face the most dangerous of enemies. He was a man of great strength, and was always ready to overcome the most powerful of opponents. He was a man of great beauty, and was always ready to win the hearts of the most beautiful of women. He was a man of great power, and was always ready to rule over the most powerful of nations. He was a man of great glory, and was always ready to receive the most glorious of crowns. He was a man of great fame, and was always ready to be the most famous of men. He was a man of great wealth, and was always ready to be the wealthiest of men. He was a man of great influence, and was always ready to be the most influential of men.
