The Youth's Dream.

It was New Year's night. An aged man was standing at a window. He mournfully raised his eye towards the deep blue sky, where the stars were floating like lilies on the surface of a clear calm lake. Then he cast them on the earth, where a few more helpless beings than himself were moving towards their inevitable goal—the tomb. Already he had passed sayly of the stages which lead to it, and he had brought from his journey nothing but errors and represent We have the annual report of the Board of Trustees for the Massachusetts General Hospital. It presents a brief and very valuable review of the year's operations of the two branches of this magnificent charity. We observe that with the enlargement of expenses, and the necessary enlargement of the demands upon the Hospital, the expenses of the last year have materially exceeded the income. There is no considerable reduction possible in these expenses; and it. follows, therefore, that to sustain the institution on the scale which humanity and which lead to it, and he had brought from his ourney nothing but errors and remorse. His nealth was destroyed, his mind unfurnished, his leart sorrowful, and his old age devoid of com-ort.
