Utah ... The Salt Lake Country.

Salt Lake is situated between the fortieth and forty-second degrees of north latitude, and is not less than thirty miles in length from north to south, varying in width from five to thirty miles. Its clevation above the Gulf of Mexico is two thousand four hundred feet, and it forms the bottom of a vast basin, surrounded by mountains, five or six thousand feet high.—Part of the banks and-bottom of the lake are composed of rocks and salt springs, and the waters are entirely impregnated with a saline substance, so that evaporation shows thirty-three parts in one hundred of salt, while the water of the sea shows only four parts in one waters' are entirely impregnated with a saline substance, so that evaporation shows thirty-three parts in one hundred of salt, while the water of the sea shows only four parts in one hundred. The waters of Salt Lake, therefore are of an extraordinary density. No fish can live there, and the borders of the lake areateric. Happily, in this accursed lake there is a narrow passage leading to another lake, called Utah, (the name of an Indian tribe,) the level of which is one hundred feet above the surface of the first. The water in Utah Lake is drinkable, fresh and limpid. The richness of the country in the neighborhood of these lakes caused Brigham Young to resolve upon settling the Mormons at this spot. He thought, with wisdom, that it was better for him to become exclusive master of this great basin, where the distance and nature offered an impregnable fortress, than to go to California and encounter the heatility of a crowd of gold-seckers. The resemblance of Salt Lake to the Dead Sea could be presented as a providential design, and an indication of the place where the new Jerusalem should be founded. The colony chose a position extremely advantageous, upon the Strait between the two lakes, and founded there the city of Descret, a name which signifes "bechiev" in the pretended "Reformed Egyptian" language—The speet presented by this young city is very pleutresque. It is divided into twenty quarters, each forming a separate inclosure. The houses are built of adobes, or bricks dried in the sun, are only a story high, and are surrounded by gardens. The springs, which descend the mountains, flow in little rivulets into the gardens and streets. The stores are nurvous and elegant. The State house is nine-ty-nine by forty feet. The town is protected by a fordified inclosure, and the number of inhabitants is about thirty thousand. The neighboring country is highly cultivated, and return with usury the products which are confined to it. The water all between the lakes is utilized for turning numerous mills. In fact this

"Good to Make Men Of."

A gentleman once asked a company of little boys, what they were good for ! One little fellow promptly answered—
"We are good to make men of."
Think of that, my young friends; you are all good to make men and women of. We do not mean—nor did that little boy—that you are merely good to grow up to the size of men and women. No, we mean a good deal more than this. You are to make persons that will be respected and useful—that will help to do good in the world. No one, who is not useful, and who does not seek to make the world better deserves the name of man or woman.
You should not forget that, if there are to be any men and women—any that deserve such a name—they they are the world.

Invenile Wit.

An old physician was dilating in our hearing the other day, upon the propensity which a majority of people display for eating unripe fruit and vegetables. Said he—

"There is not a vegetable growing in our gardens that is not best when arrived at matugardens that is not best when arrived at maturity, and most of them are positively injurious unless fully ripe."
"I know one thing that ain't so good when its ripe as when green," interrupted a little boy in a very confidential but modest man-

"What's that?" sharply said the physician, vexed at having his principle disputed by a mere boy.

"A cucumber!" responded the lad.

The doctor winked at us with both eyes, bu

HEALTH OF CHILDREN - When children have Health of Children.—When children have the misfortune to be placed in draughts of colding, they lose their heat very readily, and with great difficulty legain it. It cannot be too strongly impressed upon mothers and nurses, that a temporary chill is followed by a permanent effect, and that not only does the chill effect that particular part of the body to which the depressing agent is applied, but, in a short time, the temperature of the entire body becomes reduced. It is thus that thin or wet shoes, unsufficient or wet clothing, or wet sheets, or a damp room, produce mischief, disease or death.

The Ecocation of Boys.—It is a noticable fact that boys under twenty constitute a majority of all ordinarily engaged in broils and riots. This results from the neglect and bad inluence of careless and criminal parents; and from the inefficient provision made for the education and care of "Street Children." One juvenile work house or asylum is worth ten jails or state prisons, as "an ounce of provention is worth a pound of cure." And one engine house where boys are allowed to congregate, is worse than ten grog shops.—Albany Journal.

"Good to make men of." What kind of men will our youthful readers be twenty years hence? Will they be classed with the intelligent, the respectable, the industrious, the prosperous, the benevolent, the pious men of the time! for doubtless there will be such.
