Poetical.

THE POET AND THE STARS. BY FRANCIS BROWNE.

A sage of the starry science sat In his high and guardless tower, And swept the night-heaven's boundless realm With a glass of wondrous power.

news had much pleased the king, because he had always heard that love bound a man to a country more than anything, and thought the Marquis would be more faithful ever afterwards.

Madame de Monto Jan in reply wrote a very charming letter. Among other things, she said: I would rather die than do anything of which I might have reason to repent; yet I will confess that the extreme necessity in which the death of the late marshal left me, almost made me trip in words.

At length to his far-seeing glass The wanderer came again; The love was cold and the home was low, And he turned to the bright stars then, I greet thee well, quoth the scornful sage.

Between the stars and me, For thus it is that the world's way, And thus it is that this weary world, Is full of parted things.

So is the world's way marked and stayed, For the soul is out of place, And life is a burdened heritage, And man is a troubled race.

Miscellaneous.

Romantic Breach of Promise

In fifteen hundred and thirty eight, when France happened to be at peace, and nothing was talked of at Court, save the memoirs, wars, and festivals, tournaments, carnivals, musquerades, and so forth, were followed so closely as to supply the town folks with talk.

Madame de Monto Jan died in Piedmont, leaving no children. His wife was instantly beset with offers of marriage by various great lords of her own country, but she refused to be prevailed on to accept of any of them.

Madame de Monto Jan was a very respectable and virtuous lady, adorned with great beauty, and in the flower of her youth; she possessed, moreover, sixty thousand livres of revenue in right of her family, and considerable expectations.

Henry Ward Beecher on Boys.

A boy is a piece of existence quite separate from all things else, and deserves separate chapters in the natural history of man.

So long as boys are babies, how much they are cherished! But by-and-by the cradle is needed for another. From the time a baby becomes a boy, until he is a young man, he is in an anomalous condition.

Here's a business! exclaims the President, familiarly. "Greaser, you can sack up your papers. There is no writing to do.

Every Laplander has his dozen or two dozen deer, and the flocks of a Lap Crossed are sometimes to two hundred head.

Lapland Marriages. Every Laplander has his dozen or two dozen deer, and the flocks of a Lap Crossed are sometimes to two hundred head.

Truthfulness. Of all the happy households, that is the happiest where falsehood is never thought of.

A Duchman having enlisted in the service at a military station, not a hundred miles from New York, was one evening placed on guard.

The Wages of Sin is Death.

A young man, who was in prison, awaiting his trial for a serious crime, was asked what ruined him.

How do you depend upon it, boys and girls, that you can pass safely along the ways of life you must be careful of your steps.

No Gloom at Home.

Above all things there should be no gloom in the home. The shadows of dark discontent and wastefulness should never cross the threshold.
