

Report on Kansas Affairs.

The majority of the committee of the House of Representatives, to whom was referred the Kansas difficulty have prepared their report through their chairman, the Hon. A. S. Stephens, of Georgia. It is spoken of as being exceedingly able, elaborate, and conclusive. It embodies all the laws, facts, and proceedings in relation to the Leocompton constitution, bearing upon the question of admitting Kansas as a State. They embrace the following points: First—The law taking a sense of the people upon the expediency of calling a Convention. Second—The law providing for the call of a Convention in pursuance of the popular will expressed. Third—The registration of voters and the apportionment of delegates made by Secretary Stanton. Fourth—The assembling of the Convention at Leocompton and their action in submitting the slavery question, the only one in controversy, to the people. Fifth—The Constitution formed by the Convention as assembled. Sixth—The action of the people on the questions in it submitted to vote on the 21st of December. These are all the essential facts embraced in the call. Perfect legal and regularity mark every step of the proceedings. Why should not the State be admitted? asks the report. The report then takes up and answers the objections which do not arise on the face of the record. No Constitutional can be said which is not ratified by a popular vote. This position of Gov. Walker is shown to be untenable, both on principle and authority. None of the Constitutions of the old States were thus ratified, and many of them were not. The second objection—the want of an enabling act—is shown to be untenable by numerous precedents. The case of California in particular. Another objection is as to the fairness of the registry and apportionment. This is fully answered. There are eight counties in Kansas, twenty-one of which were represented. Thirteen of the others have little or no population. In these thirteen, on the 4th of January election, there was less than one hundred votes cast against the Constitution. The four others had no registry, and the election was not permitted to make it. They were driven away by force and threats. The report ignores the votes of the 4th of January, although arguing that a fair interpretation of the vote upon the basis of apportionment made by Secretary Stanton would show that the Constitution had not been defeated even then. The report is very elaborate, and covers all the points, and closes with an able argument for the admission of Kansas as recommended by the President. This is urged as best for Kansas, as well as the peace and harmony of the whole Union. The report and resolution were carried by a vote of eight to seven. The Committee returned sine die, with the understanding that Mr. Stephens would not present his report to the House for a few days, allowing the minority time to prepare theirs. A RAINY NIGHT IN THE CARB.—The editor of the New York Courier thus discourses upon one of the advantages of civilization: "We have tested the comforts of a night of rain, gale, and wind, and all that the storm could do to oppress upon the traveler what an invention, what a boon of civilization, that relief, it was to roll securely through all this gloom, and in the face, in the soul of the storm; and while the rain dashed over road and river, to be kept dry and safe in a lighter or a heavier coat, and where the thoughts could glide into silent perplexity, the very threshold to sleep. A rainy night in the cars! That is which lifts this country high, if not dry, above all others. Where else, in our times, and where else, in lands of the civilized, could the traveler smile at the storm, and find rather more pleasure from its contrasts than hindrance from its power? The wanderer, who, in the face of the storm, century since would, on such a night as this, would have been the personification of a dull despair. He would have been saturated at the first mile, beginning with a close and a protracted, with every prospect of a close and a protracted, to consumption and rheumatism at the close of his doleful journey."
