A Master Murdered by his Slaves.

The body of Mr. John W. Watkins, of Surry county, Va., was found in a ravine on his farm, having been brutally murdered. The Petersburg Express gives the following particulars of the discovery of the murderers: After removing the body to the house, and i being duly cleansed and arranged, the servant being duly cleansed and arranged, the servants of deceased were all called up and examined separately. From the facts elicited, the jury of inquest was fully convinced that the murder was committed by a boy, named Madison, only 14 years of ago, but quite stout and remarkably well graym.

Madison's appearance indicated that he had changed his clothes, and a strict search having been instituted, one of his garments was soon This being exhibited to the young flend, he confessed that he was present at the scene of the cruel outrage, but did not commit the nurder. He stated that one of his fellow servants, Cato threw the rope over his master's head, whils another, named Isaac, sunck the fatal blow, and that he was a mere spectator. He stated further, that, after his master was knocked down, he was dragged with the rope around his neck to the woods near the gate, where he was found and then cruelly beaten and bruised until life was extinct.

On examining the clothes of deceased, it was found that his gold watch had been stolen, and that his hat was also missing. The boy denied any knowledge of their whereabouts, but after being threatened with a severe thrashing, produced the missing articles. The hat was hid but a short distance off, and the watch had been taken to the vicinity of the house, and buried at the trunk of a tree. A knile and key were also missed, but the boy protested for some time that he knew notting of them. Finally he produced these also. The boy states that his master sand for mercy while the heating was being inflicted, and, with his dying breath, askded the Lord to have mercy on him.

He was a man universally esteemed. In all the relations of life, as husband, parent, master and neighb, r, he acted out the golden rule do unto others as ye would that they should do unto you." He was a firm and consistent Christian, and had for many years worshipped with the Methodist Episcopal church, of which he was a most useful and exemplary member. He was noted for his kind and indulgent treatment to be designed. ment to his servants-indeed many thought him inexensably length towards them. What could have prompted the three wretches who so cruelly slaughtered him, to the commission of the foul deed, is past finding out. Such a requital for treatment so humane is indeed incompre-

He leaves an estimable wife, and six promising children, (the eldest a well grown, intelli-gent lad.) a mother, brothers, sisters and many other dear relatives and friends, to whom he was devotedly attached, and who in turn loved him with the most sincere affection.

The three negroes charged with the murder, have all been safely lodged in juil and will most assuredly expiate the horrible crime which they have committed upon the scaffold.

Before the era of metalic pens, which have caused a revolution in the art of writing. great pains were given to the preparation of pens, and very extraordinary exclusiveness was indulged in by writers.

The memory of such a man deserves something more than a chronicle of his decease. His the affords useful lessons, especially to such as are thrown as he was originally, without the aid of personal friends, among the temptations and struggles of the commercial and social world. At an early age he came from Adams county and chose this place for his future home. He soon acquired means to commence trade for himself, and formed respectable confrade for himself, and formed respectable con-nexions in life. During the twenty, years in which he pursued business here, he steadily ad-vanced in wealth and influence, honorably dis-charged the duties of several offices which his fellow citizens imposed upon him, and by his gentlemaply and friendly deportment, drew to himself the esteem and even affection of a large nimeer the estern underen anceron or a large circle. No one complains of a single injustice in trade, of of coldness when he was properly appealed to for a kind office. Many anecdotes are told among those who knew him intinately of the relief which he afforded to persons contained with him. The knew how especially to nected with him. He knew how especially to feel for the young just struggling with the genprations and difficulties of early business. The was also eminently successful, not by adventurous speculations, but by dilligent and faith ful application to his ordinary employment. He was finally enabled to ereci a large block of buildings in the control of the town on the very site where in early life he had performed service. For more than nineteen years he was a member of the First Presbyterian Church of this bordugh, in which his religious character became continually developed, and his usefulness more and more apparent to the very last. As a trusthe in that congregation, for more than twelve vears, his good Judgment, liberality and enterprise will long be renumbered.

After a long and painful disease whose obstinacy baffled all attempts at its removal or relief.

his vigorous frame was compelled to give way, but from the very first his hopes of another life were of a peculiarly cheerful and even exultant character. No room is left for doubt among those who survive him that the severe loss which they feel, is his everlasting gain.
