

AMERICAN VOLUNTEER.

JOHN B. BRATTON, Editor & Proprietor. CARLISLE, PA., NOV. 11, 1858.

We are requested to state that our two banking institutions—the Carlisle Deposit Bank and the Cumberland Valley Bank—will be closed on Thanksgiving Day, (Thursday, the 18th inst.) Those having business to transact will not forget this.

DEDICATION.—The new Methodist Church, corner of West and Pomret streets, in this borough, will be dedicated to the service of Almighty God on Sunday next. The Rev. Dr. McCune of New York, will preach at 10 1/2 o'clock, A. M.; the Rev. H. B. Rindow of Baltimore, at 3 o'clock, P. M., and the Rev. Dr. Riley of Pittsburg, in the evening.

For the Volunteer.—Mr. Editor—Will you please inform me, through the medium of your paper, why it is that the patrol who are summoned to keep peace in the streets and arrest all disorderly characters, are themselves the very first to disturb the peace, by interfering with peaceful and quiet persons who are on their way home? They are the first to raise a disturbance instead of quelling one.

REMARKS.—We know nothing concerning the conduct of those who have been detailed to serve as a patrol. If men who serve in this capacity so far forget themselves as to disturb the quiet of the town or offer insult to well-disposed citizens, they should be informed on and exposed. A patrol should be composed of men who have the welfare of our citizens and the peace of the town at heart.

The present, of all seasons of the year, is the time when people should make thorough examinations of their stove pipes, chimneys and flues, to guard against accidents by fire. Stove pipes that have been standing in disuse during the summer months, should be carefully examined, as it is frequently the case, in some unoccupied room, or in a garret, an elbow may be knocked out of place, or a joint worked loose; a brick may have been knocked out of a stove pipe hole in the garret, or there may be a crack in the chimney itself, through which sparks may find egress. Look to it now, as by exercising a little caution now, thousands of dollars worth of property may be saved.

LONG EVENINGS.—The summer work is done, the harvest has been gathered, the busy days of toil are to be succeeded by the season which a benevolent God has designed for the relaxation of the profligate earth, and the mental improvement of his creatures. From the autumn to the vernal equinox, the long evenings suggest and afford the proper opportunity for rest, recreation and instruction. And the family newspaper, the school teacher, and the popular lecturer are, perhaps, equally important in subserving these varied purposes. The newspaper will keep the reader in practical relations with the progress of the world, and the doings of his fellow-beings around him, the school-teacher will make him better acquainted with the books of the present and the lore of the past; while the lecturer will introduce him to the more intricate problems of art and science, and the more familiar details of the advancing philosophies, in their numerous applications to the varied purposes of human life.

BOYS IN THE STREETS.—The revivies of our town boys through our streets at night are becoming to be regarded as a nuisance by the greater portion of our community, and merit the speedy attention of our public officers. Not only do they block up the pavement, but frequently annoy passers by with their coarse yuglarities. So it is at many of the corners of our main thoroughfares. Night running is ruinous to the morals of the boys in all instances. They acquire, under cover of night, an unhealthy state of mind, bad, vulgar and profane language, obscene practices, criminal sentiments, and a lawless and riotous bearing. Indeed, it is in the street, after nightfall, the boys principally acquire the education of the bad, and capacity for becoming rowdy, dissolute men. We hope our public officers will give them their attention, and receive that co-operation from parents and guardians in their respect, which the merits of the case deserve.

A WORD TO APRENTICES.—A journal devoted to the interests of labor, addresses the following advice to apprentices: "In what way do you spend your leisure evenings? In idleness—in frivolous amusements—or in the company of those who will corrupt your morals? Remember, if you would prepare yourself for future usefulness, you must devote early spare moments to study. First be industrious in your several employments during the hours of business; never complain that it is your lot to work; count it an honor; go about it with cheerfulness and alacrity; it will become a habit, and by becoming so, will be a pleasure and delight. Make it your business to promote the interest of your employer; by taking care of his, you will learn to take care of your own."

THE NEGRO VOTE IN NEW YORK.—In New York, owing to the ascendancy of the Abolition-Republican party in that State, negroes are allowed to vote. The negro population is sufficiently numerous to hold the balance of power and the politicians vie with each other in bidding for their votes. At the election which came off on Tuesday week, there were four candidates for Governor; Smith, Abolitionist and Temperance; Morgan, Black Republican; Burrows, American; and Parker, Democrat. It is said that the negro vote was cast almost exclusively for Morgan, the Black Republican candidate. From this it would seem that the negroes prefer the Black Republicans even to the radical Abolitionists.

THE DEMOCRATIC MAJORITY IN THE CITY OF NEW YORK IS, IN ROUND NUMBERS, ABOUT 10,000. The rest of the State, however, played the very reverse with the Democratic party. The Republican majority in the State will be some 16,000 over the Democratic candidate for Governor.

THE SUNBURY AND ERIE RAILROAD CASE.—We learn from the Pittsburg Post, that the Supreme Court have filed an opinion in favor of the plaintiff in the case of the Sunbury and Erie Railroad Company vs. Cooper, deciding that the act of Assembly for the sale of the canal is constitutional, and that a decree will be entered accordingly at the next Nisi Prius Court, subject to an appeal to the Court in Banc.

William Sander, who murdered Peter Shork at Hamptonburg, N. Y., in August last, in a fit of jealousy, has been sentenced to be hung at Goshen, on Friday, Dec. 3.

The President has commuted the sentence of death against Charles Barrett for the murder of Beve Lewis, into imprisonment for life in the penitentiary of Washington.

What the Future?

The recent elections have decided the complexion of the next House of Congress, says the Reading Gazette. The opponents of the Democratic party will have a majority of some twenty votes, as near as can be ascertained at present. The defection upon the Kansas question, the scarcity of work and money, prostration of business, and general "hard times" for all which the party now in power has been most unjustly, held responsible—and various causes of a local nature, have conspired to bring about this result, which every good Democrat and lover of his country must deeply deplore.

But, although it is far from agreeable to contemplate, in this transfer of power in the popular branch of Congress, an apparent condemnation by the people of the present Democratic Administration, just as its policy is about to be fairly developed, a reference to the past will show that there is nothing in this circumstance, to discourage us for the future. The State elections of 1854, two years after the national canvass which made Franklin Pierce President, resulted more disastrously than those of the present year. The Thirty-Fourth Congress was organized—but a hard time it had before it did organize—with a combined Opposition majority of eighty against the Democratic party in the House of Representatives. This was a much worse condition of affairs than we now find. But the healthy reaction of popular sentiment which had been, for the time, misled by the violence of sectional feeling, growing out of the passage of the Kansas Nebraska Act, and the politico-religious crusade of Know-Nothingism—came sooner than the most sanguine Democrats dared to hope, and much sooner than the least confident of their opponents deemed possible. In 1856, two short years after this revolution, the National Democracy triumphed in the election of James Buchanan, and carried a sufficient number of Representatives in the several States to give them a majority of twenty in the House when the Thirty-Fifth Congress assembled. It is true, we have again lost what we achieved so gloriously in 1856; but if we may judge of the future by the past—and this is no safer standard—our defeat is but temporary, and the precursor of a triumphant restoration to popular favor in 1860. Notwithstanding the reverses which now stare us in the face, the Democratic party is better organized and possessed of a larger share of recuperative energy than it was after the blow it received in 1854, and the Opposition are not a bit better, if, as well, prepared to take advantage of their success, than they were at that time. The defeat of the Democracy is the only bond of union among them. That they have accomplished, and therefore they will soon as they have repeatedly done under similar circumstances, separate into their original discordant elements, and contend among themselves for supremacy over each other. And besides, it is no desirable thing for any party—even the most compactly united and harmonious—in times of general prostration like these, to shoulder the responsibility of administering the revenues of the Government, as the Opposition inevitably must, when the new Congress assembles. For our part, we are by no means dissatisfied that they have undertaken it, although we regard this party of this heavy burden as equally equal to the task, and that their policy, had the people suffered it to be tried, would have been vindicated by time and experience. But a change has been decreed, and we shall soon see whether they were so ready to charge incapacity, extravagance, and a disregard of the public welfare upon the party in power, and the volunteer to set all things to rights, are any better housekeepers than those they have displaced. If it should happen that their practice comes up to their profession, it will be for the first time in the history of the party, when the Democratic party, who, under whatever name they have occasionally crept into power, have invariably proved themselves totally unfit for the responsibilities that were cast upon them.

We are not alone in the opinion that the present success of the Opposition will by no means inure to their advantage in the future. Men of experience and foresight, among their own number, who have seen too much of the mutations of modern politics to be carried away by a passing triumph, achieved upon issues essentially transient, take the same view of the matter, and look forward to 1860 in no sanguine mood. For example, the Washington correspondent of the North American, a political writer of extensive information, and ordinarily accurate judgment, expresses his apprehensions for the future of his party, in the following deprecating strain, which, considering that he wrote in the midst of the rejoicings of his co-workers over the "glorious news" from New York, Massachusetts, New Jersey, and elsewhere, is significant, to say the least: "Whether this result will be an advantage or not, in a party sense, to those whose horizon is circumscribed by that narrow measurement, remains to be decided by the future. My own impression is that it will not be. With a Democratic President in the White House, and a large Democratic preponderance in the Senate, no policy that the House may originate, can be carried out without their assent and co-operation. This is one point. Another, and more important consideration, is the division of responsibility before the country, when the Presidential canvass shall begin. "We have already seen that the popular branch of the last Congress was charged with the onus of all the appropriations then made. And it is very certain now, even if there should be an Opposition majority, that no such dogmas as have recently been asserted by Mr. Seward, can command, or will deserve to command, a united vote. Whenever he and his peculiar followers attempt to impose that sort of test, they will be left in as beggarly a minority as their worthy co-laborers in the south, who audaciously advocate disunion as a universal panacea for all real or imaginary grievances."

This is the opinion of one whose opportunities of reading the political horizon make him an Oracle worth listening to. If he sees little or no encouragement for the future, in the recent successes of his party, how much less should Democrats find in them anything to be disheartened about? We have only to keep up our courage, maintain our organization intact, stand by our principles ever more closely than ever, and trust to the returning good sense and sound judgment of the people. None but an united and a national party can ever successfully administer the government of the United States; and that party is not the combination of heterogeneous and discordant factions which has just secured a majority in the House of Congress.

Gov. J. W. Denver, of Kansas, has reached Washington.

President Buchanan against the Fillibusters.

When the redoubtable "man of destiny," Walker, was last logged out of Nicaragua by the head and shoulders, Captain Paulding performing that national police duty in the most prompt and determined manner, it was scarcely to be expected that the hero of so many defeats would have the audacity to make the third attempt to invade Nicaragua. We had set down the recent manifesto of Walker, announcing his departure for that country as a "peaceful emigrant," to the bravo, which is so conspicuous in his public efforts, and not to any serious intemperance which must end in putting their necks in the halter. It appears, however, that the government is satisfied that the announcement springs from another concerted movement against Nicaragua, and President Buchanan has thought it necessary to give timely warning of the illegality of such an enterprise, and to instruct the public authorities to use vigilance in preventing it from leaving the United States. We hope, for the character of our government, that the public officers will have a better sense of their duty than they have yet evinced in relation to fillibuster expeditions, and not only break up the expedition but seize the fillibusters themselves in the act of transgressing against the laws. If President Fillmore had allowed the fillibusters who were taken at Cuba to be shot, without his interference, from humanity, to save their lives, we should never have heard of a second fillibuster expedition. President Fillmore's interference, then, and President Pierce's interference since, to save Walker from the punishment he deserves, do not doubt have served as a stimulus to other attempts upon the national integrity, and independent of the Southern Republics. Walker calculates upon the impunity which he escapes again if he gets freebooting desisted to escape again if he gets into difficulty. But if he be caught in the attempt to carry out his illegal purpose, he should take to some part of the country where fillibustering is regarded as a crime, and see whether he can be convicted for his offences. If he falls into any other hands while engaged in his piratical foray, he should be left to their tender mercies to be dealt with as he deserves, without any interference from the government whose allegiance he has voluntarily thrown off, and whose laws he has so frequently violated.

THE DEPRESSION OF BUSINESS.—The Board of Trade of Philadelphia, have addressed circulars to all the prominent manufacturers and business men of the State, for the purpose of obtaining the most extensive and accurate information possible, with regard to the present condition of the industrial and manufacturing interests of Pennsylvania; as well as to elicit their opinion upon the causes which have produced this depression and the proper remedy therefor. They say: "We would be glad to learn to such extent as you may be willing to communicate for so desirable an end, the general condition within the last fifteen years, of manufacturing or industrial interests with which you are most familiar; the period of their highest prosperity, and the progress and extent of their decline; together with your view of the immediate causes of such depression, if any exist, and your opinion of the proper measures to be taken for the restoration of their former prosperity and vigor. We shall be glad also to receive any collateral information bearing on this subject, within the range of your observation, especially in regard to the necessary practical steps of an agricultural interest in your neighborhood, in this depression of the industrial and producing countries."

The inquiries are important ones, as out of the various answers returned, probably some practical suggestions may be made which will help the industrial interest of the State. The principal cause of the depression of business is the undue expansion of credit, and unless there is some check put to this, recurrence of panic and depression will happen regularly with the over expansion.

KNOW-NOTHING RULE IN BALTIMORE.—The recent disorders in Baltimore furnish a terrible picture of the state of society in that city. Some time since Police Officer Benton was killed by some of the rowdies who infest that city. Last week Henry Gambrell was convicted of this murder. Shortly after his conviction the telegraph informed us that an attempt was made to rescue him, and an attack upon the jail was threatened, so that it had to be carefully guarded. Meanwhile, George W. Rigdon, one of the most faithful and exemplary officers of the police, whose testimony had formed an important portion of the evidence upon which Gambrell was convicted, was shot and instantly killed while quietly standing in his own house. A man named Peter Carré was seen running from the neighborhood of Rigdon's house immediately after the murder. He was pursued by a policeman, and on the way running pistol shots were exchanged between the pursuer and the pursued. When he was finally captured he confessed that he was standing by Mason Crepp when the latter shot Rigdon. There was a strong disposition to lynch Carré when he was first captured, but the officers succeeded in locking him up before this project was fully arranged. If we are to judge from the violence which prevails at Baltimore on election days and such terrible occurrences as we have briefly narrated above, roydism is rampant and supreme, and a reign of terror of the worst description is established in that unfortunate city.

THE AMERICAN AGRICULTURALIST.—This valuable journal is once more in our possession. It grows in interest to the farmer and mechanic. Much attention is being paid to this periodical to make it one of the most useful in the ranks of agricultural journals. Its pages are illustrated with engravings of an agricultural character, and the subjects written upon are of that nature which cannot fail to instruct the most practical tiller of the soil. The gardener, the builder, the stock raiser, and the out-door worker in general, can find valuable information in the pages of this journal. As it is designed to improve all classes engaged in the culture of the soil, it cannot fail to be appreciated in the rural homes of our happy country. A work like this will find its way into the most benighted regions, and greatly enlighten the inhabitants of that wild wilderness, and animate them with energy and zeal so as to hew out a comfortable existence among the sturdy oaks. The work is published by Orange Judd, New York, at $1.00 per annum, in advance.

THE WHEAT MIKE.—Geo. S. Woodhull, of Fenton, Mich., asserts that the midge does not leave the wheat until it is thrashed, and then it goes to the chaff and straw, and probably lies dormant till spring, when it hatches into a fly and deposits its eggs. He thinks this troublesome pest might be destroyed by burning the straw and chaff of affected wheat for a few years.

A Hundred Years Ago.

A Pittsburg paper, alluding to the near approach of the one hundredth anniversary of the Fort Duquesne, says: "One hundred years ago there was not a single white man in Ohio, Kentucky, Indiana and Illinois Territories. Then, what is now the most flourishing part of America, was as little known as the country round the mountains of the moon. It was not until 1793, that the 'Hunter of Kentucky,' the gallant and adventurous Boone, left his home in North Carolina, to become the first settler in Kentucky. The first pioneers in Ohio did not settle until twenty years after this time. A hundred years ago Canada belonged to France, and the whole population of the United States did not exceed a million and a half of people. A hundred years ago the great Frederick of Prussia was performing those great exploits which have made him immortal in military annals, and with his little monarchy was sustaining a single handed contest with Russia, Austria and France—the three great powers of Europe, combined. A hundred years ago Napoleon was not born, and Washington was a young and modest Virginia Colonel, and the great events in the history of two worlds, in which these great but dissimilar men took leading parts, were then scarcely foreshadowed. A hundred years ago the United States were the most loyal part of the British Empire, and on the political horizon no specter indicated the struggle which, within a score of years thereafter, established the greatest republic of the world. A hundred years ago there were but four newspapers in America—steam engines had not been imagined, and railroads and telegraphs had not entered the remotest conception of man. When we come to look back at it through the vista of history, we find that to the century which has passed has been allotted more important events in their bearing upon the happiness of the world than almost any other which has elapsed since the creation."

LATE NEWS FROM EUROPE.—By the arrival of the steamship America from Liverpool, we have three days' late news from Europe. A few intelligible words have been received at Valencia, over the Atlantic cable, and the selling price of the shares immediately advanced from £350 to £400. The French and Portuguese consols are as yet unsettled, though a favorable solution was expected, notwithstanding that two French vessels of war, in addition to the two previously stationed there, had arrived at the Tagus. There are vague rumors mentioned that the English-channel fleet had been ordered to the Tagus. The London Times of the 20th ult., contains a severe attack upon the American policy in China, and the course of Minister Reed. It charges Mr. Philadelphia diplomat with making a bad bargain for his own country, and endeavoring to prevent the English Ambassador from making a better one for Great Britain; and also accuses him of being a tool of Russia throughout the whole period of the negotiation. The Atlantic Telegraph Company had notified their employees at Valencia, that unless some favorable turn occurred in reference to the cable, their services would be dispensed with on the 30th of November. The London money market continued very easy, two per cent. being the maximum rate of discount. Consols are quoted at 98 1/4 for money, and 98 for account. In the Liverpool market cotton closed quiet, the last quotations being barely maintained. There was a slight decline in all descriptions of goods at Manchester.

SEVERE DROUGHT—RAIN PRAYED FOR.—The Norfolk (Va.) Day Book says that the drought in that section of the State is so great that the citizens of Suffolk are forced to send three miles to the Canal for water to drink; an event that was never before known by the oldest inhabitant of that town. Whilst this is the case in Suffolk, Norfolk is debarré of such an opportunity for obtaining supplies of water. Nearly all the systems have been exhausted, and rich and poor are now beginning to suffer for want of this great life-giving element. An alarm of fire is now looked upon by the thoughtful as a terrible thing, for if a conflagration should break out two or three hundred yards from the river, it must result in immense destruction. It has been suggested that the Clergy of the various denominations should offer up the prayers of the people to Almighty God for relief in fresh and abundant showers of water to slake their thirst.

THE GREAT RUSSIAN RAILROAD.—Much has been said in the papers recently about the alleged swindling of the Russian Government, by American Engineers in the construction of a Railway. This railway is described in one of the letters of Bayard Taylor. He says that it is a magnificent and a sublime work, and that the Emperor Nicholas had built it upon the shortest possible distance between the two cities, by carrying it four hundred yards through swamps, where an artificial foundation of piles was necessary. Mr. Taylor considers it the finest railway in the world, and adds: "There are thirty-three stations between Moscow and St. Petersburg. At the most of these the station houses and palaces, all built exactly alike, are on a scale of magnificence which seems expensive. A great deal of needless labor has been wasted upon them. The bridges, also, are models of solidity and durability. Everything is on the grandest scale, and the punctuality and exactness of the running arrangements are worthy of all praise. But at what a cost has all this been achieved. This road, 400 miles in length, over a level country, with very few cuts, embankments and bridges, except between Moscow and Tyer, about one-fourth of the distance, has been built at an expense of 120,000,000 of rubles, ($80,000,000 or $225,000 per mile. When one takes into consideration the cheapness of labor in Russia, the sum becomes still more enormous."

A SINGULAR SERRICAL OPERATION.—A man named Berry, residing in Petersburg, was suffering intense pain from a felon on his hand. On the 7th ult., he seated himself by the track of the Petersburg Railroad, and when the train approached, coolly laid his hand on the rail, the cars passing over and severing it from the wrist. The consequence was that he had to undergo a second operation by the surgeon.

Hon. J. Glancy Jones has resigned his seat in Congress, to enter upon the official duties of the high position to which he has been appointed by the President. His letter of resignation to the Governor is dated the 1st instant.

James Hope, of Upper St. Clair, Allegheny co., Pa., having been convicted and fined $500 and costs in a slander suit, hung himself to a tree near his residence, on Monday morning. He was near fifty years of age, and the father of twelve children.

A Picture Well Drawn.

An article in the New Orleans Courier on the "stump tail press" contains some forcible and applicable truths. It is a patent fact that the press has suffered severely from association with ignorant and low-minded men, who are better fitted for any other occupation than that of conducting public journals. This class is admirably sketched in the subjoined extract from the article alluded to: "The stump-tail press is an institution in this country. It is in the hands of men whose avocation is boundless but whose knowledge is limited, and whose caprices take the place of prudence and judgment, who know no other stimulus to their industry than gold and who recognize no other motto of success. Its leading object is to get its issues sold, to accomplish which it knows no tricks too low to employ. Excitement and agitation are its meat and drink. Its writers are not concerned with the quantity rather than the quality. It eschews consistency as a relic of the old logy age and finds it easy to ride on either side of any question. It is ready at any cost to bolster up any avindale for a large portion of the profits, and is always prepared to laud folly or whitewash vascularity (for a consideration). It is in its praise of all others, chiefly delighting in puffing of quacks' wares and praises of shonmen, actors, circus-riders and wandering lecturers. Presents of cheap books will buy its flattering notices of the most vulgar trash. Its writers are ready to do anything to get their names in print, and will sell their souls for a few lines of notice. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out of the patronage which is their just due. They will not only do this, but will advertise to half price, relying upon future extortions to make up their losses. They never dream that the public are not interested in their private and personal pique, and that their advertisements will be read by the public as a whole, and not as a part of the circulation of their circulation and trying to swindle their honest brethren out