FARM AND GARDEN.

THE COTTAGE DOOR.

How sweet the rest that labor yields The humble and the poor, Where sits the patriarch of the fields Before his cottage door!

The lark is singing in the sky, The swallows on the eaves, And love is beaming in each eye Beneath the summer leaves!

The air amid his fragrant bowers Supplies unpurchased health, And bears a bounding 'mid the flowers, More sweet to his sweet breath.

Peace, like the blessed sunlight, plays Around his humble cot, And happy nights and cheerful days Divide his lowly lot.

And when the village Sabbath bell Rings out upon the gale, The lark is singing in the sky, The music of its tale—

A fresher verdure seems to fill The fair and dewy sod, And every infant tongue is still To be hushed to words of God.

Oh, happy hearts! to Him who stills The ravens when they cry, And makes the lily 'neath the hills So glorious to the eye—

The trusting patriarch prays to bless And labor with his hands; Such ways are 'ways of pleasantness,' And all such 'paths are peace.'

WE MEET BY CHANCE.

When evening brings the twilight hour, I pass a lonely spot; Where oft she comes to cut the flower, We call "Forget-me-not."

She neither whistles nor nor stirs; We meet by chance—the usual way. Once, how I cannot well describe, Unless by chance—we kissed—

I found her lips so close to mine, Oh! how could I resist; And neither whispered yes or nay, They met by chance—the usual way.

The roses, when the zephyr woe, Imparted what they could; They sigh, and sip the balmy dew, But never whisper, give!

Our love is mutual, this we know, Though tells the other so.

Miscellaneous.

The Galley Slaves at Toulon.

It is not to be expected that one can speak of Toulon without saying a word of the galley slaves or forcats. There are in the arsenal and yard 4500, who do all the heavy work.

They are all of the same rank, and some are employed in sawing timber, and some are attached in couples by heavy chains passing round the ankles and wrists, and linked together.

Their bodies are allowed to go singly, ironed in the morning, with the exception of the connecting chain. They are clothed in coarse canvas trousers and shirts, banded with their numbers, and a woollen jacket. Those who are condemned for life wear a long green woollen peacock cap, something like a nightcap with the top cut off and made into a cap.

The front of the cap is a tin plate with the number of the wearer punched out. The convicts who are condemned for a number of years are distinguished from the others by red caps, and those who have been in the galleys for a long time wear yellow sleeves in their jackets.

Their faces, close shaven, bronzed by exposure to the sun, and brutalized by crime, are fearful to behold, and their repulsive appearance is heightened by their hair being notched short in lines running round the head, in order to facilitate their regulation should they escape.

At night they lie down on inclined lengths of plank, without mattress or covering, in twentys or thirties, and an iron rod is run through the leg chains of each so that no one can get up without disturbing the others.

The great trouble of the convicts is that they consist of brown bread, not white wheat flour, soup, and haricots or fèves, beans. No wine or tobacco is allowed, but the convicts are permitted to receive 10¢ a month from their friends, with which they may purchase any cable article.

Their food is the most degrading punishment, which must also be the greatest obstacle to reformation, is chaining the men in couples. Youths over sixteen may be seen chained to old men tainted with every vice.

Walking or sleeping the convicts' chains are never separated until freedom or death removes one of them. In spite of the hideous costume and revolting appearance of the forcats there were some who still exhibited traces of their former position, whose gentility, so to speak, pierced through their convict garb. One, in particular, standing nearly six feet high, and who intently watched the arrival of the wounded French soldiers from Italy, struck me on account of the perfect ease and grace with which he moved, to the guardhouse guard.

Although his motions were accompanied by the horrid clanking of his chains. At the time of my visit it was told that there were then among the forcats Colonel de Cery, who commanded a regiment at Marseilles in 1851, who was charged with the execution of the coup d'etat in this town, and who was subsequently confined at Escovierie; Capt. Douneau, chief of the Bureau Arab, convicted of having conspired to murder an Arab; Lieutenant de Meroy, convicted of having unfairly and with premeditation slain another officer when tipsy in a duel, the chief army accountant (chief comptable) who was sent to the Crimea, the two managers of the bank of Toulon, and six abbés, and there are more who manage to keep their former calling secrets.

An eminent painter is chained to a distinguished member of the Paris bar, and between them they keep the accounts of one department of the prison, while of lawyers and notaries there is no end. Among the forcats are men of all ages, as well as in society. We observed, for example, one an Englishman, who was arrested at Calais, with forged notes in his possession, and who there is every reason to believe, was guiltless of any criminal intention. He has recently been brought to Toulon from Rochefort, his consumption, and not allowed to wear a lampl, although permitted to do so in Rochefort. There is also a hazy rumor of a British peer of the realm being among the forcats, but as no one has ever seen him, it may be dismissed as a myth. To the present government of France is due the most creditable effort to deal with the great social evil, the Bagues, where vice stagnates and grows more hideous, to be again let loose on society. Penal settlements have been formed in Africa and French Guiana, to which some of the convicts have been removed. Toulon is now the only Bagne, though of Rochefort and Brest have been abolished, but still the work goes on very slowly.

Georgia Court—A Rich Scene.

After a well-known Georgia Solicitor General had administered the usual oath to the grand and petit jurors and bailiffs, he turned to the presiding Judge, and remarked:

"Sol.—May it please your honor, I do not remember any form of oath administered to the lobby bailiffs, but by your permission, I think I can frame one that will be satisfactory to the Court.

Judge.—Proceed, Mr. Solicitor.

Sol.—Put your hand on the book; whereupon an tall, lean, vinegar-faced son of Ahab, stepped up and promptly grabbed the book.

Sol.—You do solemnly swear, in presence of this Court, and us lawyers, that you will take your position in the lobby, and there remain until the Court adjourns, and during the entire session of this Court, that you will not suffer any one to speak above a low whisper, and if one shall dare to do so in presence of your royal highness, you will vociferously exclaim, "Silence in the lobby!" and in order to be immediately restored, you further swear that you will, by one ponderous blow of your fist, plant him down. All this you will do to the best of your skill and knowledge, so help you God.

"Silence in the lobby!" he cried, and immediately restored, you further swear that you will, by one ponderous blow of your fist, plant him down. All this you will do to the best of your skill and knowledge, so help you God.
